Sir.

It seems now that I acted too promptly in applying for that supposed vacancy of inspector. Mr Emberson has been troubled lately with an attack of old disease (mental), and in a melancholy fit notified three newspapers of his resignation - a step which he now regrets (I suppose).

Before I did anything in the matter I received a note from Mr Emberson himself, in which he told me that his resignation was known to the Superintendent of Education.

If I had known the previous history of Mr Emberson, and his late condition I would not have acted so quickly.

Hoping that you will excuse any unnecessary correspondence.

I remain Yours
Very Respectfully
