Dear Mr. Govey

Notwithstanding that I have had two letters from you since my return from Ottawa I have to apologise for not having written to you.
My mind has been harassed ^{with} with with a long drawn nightmare, & I am deeply obliged to Anne for having summarised what I at remembrance of my talk with Paukine. She did it so much better them I am Capable of doing it. Since these times I have written again to P. just as well & plainly as I can & this, I think, is my ultimatum.

Whatever comes I cannot do more, it is really making me ill. So let me be out of all in the future. It is most difficult to feel the same to Hankins but time may take the present keen edge off the principal affair & it is undoubtedly my duty to feel & be more kind to him as the best way to leave him to better usages. I shall, however, trust to give in the future as in the past for advice & ³guidance when in any difficulty. I may take this opportunity of telling you how much you have endeared yourself to me, in my loneliness, by your constant tender, thoughtful care in all these concerns my comfort.

In a letter I received fr. Eva lately she speaks this more decidedly of her wish to come to Paris in summer.
It is early to make plans but she knows best on her part & sees how my [arrangements] are necessary.
Bernard is now recovering - he is still in bed against his will. Dr. Brown tells him he has more trouble keeping his patients well after having cured them in bringing them safely through the disease & his, 13th, attack has been severe. Several of the children have had slight rippynesses.

 I have a shoe damped with Carballic and the does I send go on the other side of it. When an extraordinary mix of feathers & sex is given in that "Cutting" gave enclosed to me.
 It is a valuable Certificate to Will.
 I let us hope the prophetic part may soon be realized - there has been a long waiting time! Had I any "go" left in me I would rejoice it in some paper here in hope it might help. With love & good cheer Yours from - Mother.
