Dear Bill:

Once more I am agitated by an address, and as usual I am afflicting you with it before it goes to a printer. I solemnly swear that any errors that your eagle eye may discover will be duly sent to the printer! These things seem to become much more difficult for me as time goes on and I suppose it means that I have exhausted any slight repertoire that I may have had. Dr. Welch roped me into it, out of the kindness of his heart, and I always look upon his invitations as commands. The request was that the paper deal with some "popular" phase of the relation between science and history. I grasped at Boyle, feeling rather like one shipwrecked. The first three or four paragraphs will probably be deleted before it reaches the printer. Needless to say I will deeply appreciate any criticisms and corrections that may occur to you.

I am leaving this afternoon for St. Paul and my address there will be C/o Dr. J. F. Fulton, Sr., Hotel Commodore, Western Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota.

We shall be thinking of you on Christmas.

Yours ever,

J. D. Fulton

My dear Bill:

We seem to be ill-fated in respect of our correspondence and mail deliveries. My secretarial force has once more been duly notified of the latest miscarriage, or shall I say miscalculated delivery, and I trust that our special delivery letters will in the future get into the post in time for "The Montrealer" which leaves New Haven shortly after 10:00.

I am going up to Boston today to lecture at the Brigham. It was very sweet of H.C. to invite me and I am all of an excitement. I am going to talk about chimpanzees, monkeys, etc. and the Babinski response.

Don't worry about the Elizabethan paper. You did just the right thing in pointing out what you did and I should have been distressed had I not known of it.

With best wishes,

Yours ever,

My dear Bill:

Your letter of November 30th has arrived and so did the 'bone', but anything addressed to Mill Rock is likely to be delivered after an interval of 4 or 5 days. The service out there is atrocious. I had intended to reply immediately and had even started to express my humiliation, but I was at a loss to know how it was that the several corrections had failed to reach the printer. I enumerated them and sent them all to Viets, who then had the paper in manuscript. About 50% of them appear to have reached the printer's. What happened to the others I cannot imagine, and I shall never cease to reproach myself for not having picked them up when the proofs were ultimately submitted. Your discovery concerning Nivernois came too late, after the proofs had been returned.

It is exasperating to learn that my special delivery sent to you on Friday with $.30 postage didn't reach you until Monday. Your local Montreal post office must be more haphazard than ours in New Haven! Why don't you stir up the postmaster? I carry on an almost daily correspondence with ours and it has worked marvels. I get all my medical journals now on Saturdays, instead of having them dribble in on Mondays and Tuesdays.

Your consternation over the Elizabethan Club paper, which, as you say, was more human than humanistic, makes me feel agitated over the Boyle proof. Your suggestions and corrections were all duly considered by Hill and me, and I sincerely hope that you will not discover things corrected in galley that failed to reach the printer's. The index went back about two weeks ago and the Press promises Christmas distribution. I trust you will not have to make a trip to the customs house to obtain your copy. Your address is given in full and I have instructed the Press to mark the envelope "Reprint from learned society".

In case I haven't mentioned it before, Thayer is publishing 5 of his addresses on Osler, the Johns Hopkins Press, on December 7th.

My dear Bill:

Your nice letter of the 16th has just arrived enclosing murderous looking envelopes annotated with your red ink and the post office red stamp "Returned for postage". They shall decorate the desks of my secretaries for a few days to remind them of a point on which I waste a good deal of breath, that all letters should be weighed before posting and all postal rates read, weighed and inwardly digested!! Please let me know if any other letters from this office are held for postage.

I too have been having a good deal of spincterial asthenia but the tonic activity is now improving since my paper is over with. It occurred this morning about 11 o'clock and I must confess that the academicians proved somewhat less formidable than I had feared. They are really quite a pleasant body. Dr. Cushing has been here with Mrs. Cushing and was quite as active and in as good form as at Berne. I should like to see him settle here.

With regard to the various enclosures which have at last reached you, I had the notes on blood pressure transcribed for your special benefit and I can send you a duplicate copy if you would want to have them for Elliott, whom I assume is a reliable person. Similarly if you would like to have a transcription of the completed bibliography I shall be glad to have that made. The notes on X-ray work were also intended for your archives.

YALE UNIVERSITY · THE SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

I am enclosing with this a copy of a letter that I have just had from Amory Codman which is rather amusing, but he is a crank and the fact that his recollections and those of H.C. do not quite coincide does not worry me. I have not yet had a moment to put down the notes concerning his life but I hope to do so within a few days. If, as I hope, this letter reaches you tomorrow (Wednesday) I think it would be delightful if you just popped onto a train and came down to ^{5 PM} Baltimore to hear Sigerist's last lecture. ^(Thursday) Send Popsy a wire that you are coming and he will fall all over himself with delight. There is a rumor that he is to be in New Haven tonight for the Academy dinner. I hope so.

I am so glad that you liked the notes concerning Berne and I must thank you for returning them. I am infinitely grateful to you for the various annotations and particularly for pointing out that 'sense' is not in good usage as a verb. I had not really appreciated this though I have rather an instinctive dislike of so employing it. I was also glad to have the shade of meaning of the French 'je demande'. I had not realized that the phrase does not possess the imperative significance of the English word.

After spending Thursday and Friday in Baltimore I am going to Boston to help Lucia to get Martha and Franc married. It is rather nice to think that it is at last coming about. They have taken so long to do anything about it.

With love to Hilda and best wishes,

Yours ever,

John

Dear Dr. Fulton:

I find among my papers, your letter of October 16th which I have neglected to answer. I have been away much of the time since I received it and have postponed answering it because I hoped to have the time to look up some of my records and give you some of the absolute facts. I have talked with Dr. Cushing on the subject a number of times and find his recollections of the facts differ from mine. He is quite right that the first tube with which we took any satisfactory X-rays was brought back by Dr. Warren, but we had taken X-rays of a sort here in America months before that with tubes which had no foci, but simply a wire anode and cathode. In fact, we produced X-rays with enough intensity to take shadows of coins from ordinary electric bulbs. I still have a good many of the old tubes which I designed before the focus tube which was brought home by Dr. Warren was discovered. If you are ever in Boston and are really interested in X-ray antiquities, I think you would be surprised at the early shapes of these tubes. As you may know, Professor Trowbridge in Cambridge took pictures of the human hand which were published in the papers here in Boston within a month after Roentgen's publication in December 1895. Francis Williams took the first medical X-rays in Boston and I think I took the first surgical ones.

So far as ether charts were concerned, this little research was pointed out to us by my chief, Dr. F. B. Harrington and any credit that the use of these charts entails, belongs to him rather than to me. He made the suggestion, I did the work. Cushing at once adopted it. Incidentally, I remember writing a paper on the use of ether at that time in which I made use of the findings compiled from these charts. It was a long, truthful paper and described in detail the various untoward things which had happened to patients as a result of anesthetization while I had been a house officer. The paper was never published because Dr. Warren said that it would not do to let the medical public know how much danger there was in giving ether! I am sorry I did not save that old paper!

It happens that just at present I have so many other things to do which should be done, that I cannot give the time to amusing recollections about those early days of the X-ray. I wish I could.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) E. A. Codman, M.D.

My dear Bill,

Many thanks for your inquiry about Popsy's review of the 'Life'. I thought I had two copies, but it seems I have only one and I must therefore ask you sometime to return it. There is a note in it from H.C.'s secretary which makes me think that I have another one somewhere. If I should find it I will let you know. Are you aware that Thayer is publishing, on December 7th, a volume containing five addresses on W.O., along with some other things?

I have puzzled over your first sentence for at least 15 minutes. It looks like "I hope the 'bone' didn't distress you". I have not received a 'bone' and it reminds me that Kahn, our new German professor of psychiatry, stopped me in the hall the other day saying, "I haf a hen to pick with you". He is learning American English very rapidly!

A 12-inch ascaris under the grand piano is quite a good effort for a small pup, the day before Thanksgiving.

My dear John,

This goes to Mill Rock, not to 333, first because it contains your last two envelopes, and your far from idle secretaries who will be more than human if they don't hate me, may be spared the shock of opening it and the possible temptation (which might be a good thing) to suppress it, especially as, secondly, your latest has unburied that necrotic bone I threatened to pick with you and the hatchet I had comfortably buried with it. That's a nice long sentence for the typewriter. The syntax looks right, and the necessary elucidation follows:

Don't be hard on the lassies. The vagaries of the post-bellum post-office are too much even for the masculine, professorial intellect. How could they know that Special Delivery, is supposed to require -- and doesn't, apparently, for the first offence -- TWENTY cents in Canada? Moreover, in this case, even if they had plastered that whole Nov. 17 envelope with Geo., Ben, and toothless Theo's, it couldn't have reached me any sooner or in time. You had already suggested that tempting jaunt in a recent letter and I had forgotten to get the behind me Satan it in my last. I saw and heard something of Sigerist in Suisse and later in London and sincerely hope he may come this way. I fear their powdery noses must be rubbed in the other, the Nov. 19, mess. If the address is too long let them leave out the Osler Library (not much frequented by letter-sorters), but McGill University is necessary, and moreover, would probably have got the package of reprints past the Customs, where, I am notified, they are now reposing and whence they must be fetched.

I think you have always sent me your reprints. I have had six or more in the last year or so, and I appreciated them all, except the Humanists BONE. Of it you sent me two copies and now threaten me with more. I am ungracious enough to return you herewith the gratefully inscribed copy, because the comments I wrote in it, which will explain the shock it gave me, are rather savage. I later bit out the bitter bit on the cover. Doubtless it was the usual pressure of work, not any lack of consideration, and you have long been forgiven. But it is somewhat seismic to a sensitive purist to see in print the very errors he had corrected in the MS. and himself made responsible by being named and thanked for having read the MS.: I'm glad to see good old Viets alongside. In his Laennec he quoted me for a statement which was exactly the opposite of what I had written him.

Don't let this protest deter you from sending me future emendanda.

I was delighted to get an unsigned cheque today from Archie. Long ago I sent him one for a wedding present.

My dear Bill:

Will you wire me at once to say whether my letter of November 7th which was mailed you last Saturday afternoon, has reached you. I have just had your delightful letter this morning about the 'high-chair' and the Berne Diary which was mailed to you Sunday evening, November 8th, and you do not seem to have received any other communication from me. In the letter of Saturday, I had enclosed a good many notes concerning Dr. Cushing, his work on blood pressure and also his work on the X-ray, and I gave you a bibliography of his writings. I should be much distressed if these things got lost in the post, and my only worry is that they were mailed in an ordinary long departmental envelope which was probably not sufficiently secure. I cannot seem to impress upon people the necessity of putting things in a long clasp-manilla envelope. It is curious that they should be so difficult to procure in this country. I brought a generous supply with me from England, but they are rapidly diminishing.

We are in the thick of preparing an exhibition for the National Academy which is to meet next week, and I have been tempted several times to try and persuade you to lend us a number of things from the Osler Library but I know that this is against the rules so I have not embarrassed you. We are arranging "Bibliotheca Prima" in six divisions of science including physics, mathematics, physiology, medicine, astronomy, geology and botany. They are making me do the hard work. I have just taken several bushels of Boyle over there, along with several miscellaneous bushels.

Yours ever,

My dear Bill,

Many thanks for your nice letter of November 4th. I do not know of any adequate biographical appreciation of Dr Cushing. A few facts and dates were given in the first few pages of his birthday volume, but nothing more extensive was published. I know more than most people do about his early life, as I talked with him a good deal about it this summer, and I shall be glad to put down the essential facts if you think this would be worth while. This will probably stir me into recording the things a little more carefully than I have done thus far. In fact I think I shall try to make a beginning over the weekend.

His work on the X-ray in 1896 and his virtual introduction of local anaesthesia into general surgery are little known or appreciated, and it is not generally recognized that he brought the first blood pressure instrument to America. I have notes on all these things and will have them typed out for you with an extra carbon for your reference. I might have put down a good many things this summer, but the time was fleeting and the hour, generally, very late! I kept some notes of the Congress at Berne which I would be glad to let you see, but I must ask you to return them and to regard them as private.

My dear Bill:

Your nice letter reaches me just as I am leaving for New York. We are both very upset to hear that you have been poorly during the summer, but it is a considerable relief to learn that you are once more on your feet and back at your desk. Be careful, and take things easily during the heat of the summer.

Leonard Mackall has just been with us for four days. Fancy that! He has been pouring forth his learning in torrents, and the more whisky I gave him, the greater was the volume. He presented me with a choice copy of Beaumont in original boards and original label. To Lucia, he gave an autographed letter of Beaumont's, addressed to a New Haven bookseller, in 1834, enquiring how many copies were left of his book. I had to rise to the occasion by sending him off with the Oglethorpe's Sales Catalogue, which nearly made him turn inside out. I wish I could tell you more about the Casaubon catalogue. It is as you say intriguing, and I shall try one day to run it down. Leonard has directed my attention to the British Museum list of sales catalogues which was published in 1915. I hope to compare mine with this.

Dear Bill:

Knowing your interest in early book catalogues, I thought you would like to have a carbon copy of the list which I have just compiled for Graham Pollard; you may have noticed in The Times Literary Supplement for June 18, 1931, that he is preparing a bibliography of 16th and 17th century English book sales, and as I seem to have a good many not recorded elsewhere I thought the list might be useful to him.

This brings me once more to raise the question of the Thomas Browne 'Sale Catalogue'. What progress have you made with the Introduction? I have just found that there is a George Williams Fund at the Yale Press which is to be devoted to the publication of medical facsimiles. It amounts to five or six hundred dollars a year, and I can't think of any more suitable use to which to put this money next year than the 'Sale Catalogue'. Sam Harvey, the Professor of Surgery, also shares my view, and now that you are having a holiday at Como I should think that you would have the necessary leisure and inspiration to finish the Introduction!

Love to Hilda.

John

17th CENTURY SALE CATALOGUES

Note TABOR, Sir. p. 12.
T CASAUB [Merrill?]

(Collection of Dr. J. F. Fulton, Yale School of Medicine, New Haven, Connecticut, U.S.A.)

The following list of 17th century sale catalogues is made up of two separate collections. One, containing thirty-nine catalogues bound in a single volume lettered Sale Catalogues London 1689-1690, was obtained November 21, 1928 from E.W. Bligh, a dealer in medical books formerly of 75 Great Portland Street, W., and now of Church Hill, Midhurst, Sussex. The first catalogue in this collection is that of Mr. Edward Larkin, and those bound with it are so indicated in the notes following individual entries. The collection apparently belonged at one time to the Medical Society of London, as the library stamp appears on the titlepage of the Larkin catalogue.

The second collection, ranging from 1682-1690/1, is in eight volumes bound in early 18th century panelled calf, each with the arms of 'Lord Viscount Courtenay'. This second collection was also obtained from E.W. Bligh in July, 1930. Their provenance is otherwise unknown. In the two collections there are seventy-five catalogues extending from 1682 to 1690/1. Of these thirty-six are mentioned in Lawler's Book Auctions in England in the Seventeenth Century. The others, chiefly anonymous, he does not list.

On an unnumbered page [30] of the catalogue of Walter Rea is the following interesting note, evidently by the bookseller William Cooper:

'To supply the vacancy of this page, and to gratifie the Curious, whose Genius may lead them to make perfect their Collection, I have caused to be Printed the Names of those Persons whose Libraries have been sold by Auction, and the series of the time when.

Dear Bill,

Many thanks for your nice letter of July 7th. I am so glad you have been seeing Dr. Burch. He is a great enthusiast and also one of the first in ophthalmology to use x-radiation for therapeutic purposes. His fingers were badly burned and he was also the victim of an early attempt at plastic surgery before the gentle art was understood. Hence the bumps on his fingers.

I was greatly pleased to have your remarks about the memoir. It seems to me very happy.

I have just decided to go over to the Berne meeting the first week in September, sailing from New York August 20th. I expect to be in England for a week from September 9th to 15th, sailing immediately thereafter.

Yours ever,

John.

Thank you very much indeed for your letter of the 24th with enclosure of glossy print of Albertus Magnus contained in W. Sudhoff's article in K. Dear Bill:

Many thanks for your two replies to my telegram of last evening. I wanted to secure a photograph of the diagram of cerebral localization contained in the Albertus Magnus, 1490, and was unable to find any reproduction of it. The one in Sudhoff's 'Archiv' is excellent and we shall be able to work from this. A graduate student in the School, named Miss Leona Baumgartner, has written a splendid paper on Leonardo as a physiologist and she wishes to use as an illustration Leonardo's drawing of the ventricles to put by the side of an illustration representing the old notion concerning ventricular localization. I had not previously seen Sudhoff's article, which is most illuminating.

I gather from Mrs. Chapin that copies of Arnold's Memoirs of Lady Osler have been received; mine have not yet come, probably because they were sending me several and the custom's authorities are always cautious about letting more than one copy of the same book pass through their sticky fingers. Mrs. Chapin telephoned me last night and sounded in quite good spirits, though she seemed a little troubled by the fact that she had not enclosed notes in all of the copies of the book that had been sent out as from her. She had (in Feb.) a list of the copies which were to be sent by the Press, but she seemed not to appreciate that copies would be despatched immediately the book was ready. I hope you have received yours and that it meets with your approval. I am holding my soul in patience until my copy comes.

Members of the A. L. A. are making New Haven more hazardous than ever; traffic has been re-directed on their account and they seem quite unable to hold themselves accountable for anything! Isn't it nice to be a librarian?

Yours ever,

John

Dear Bill:

Your charming and most felicitous review of Gruner's treatise on the Canon of Avicenna has made me very envious; it is just what a review should be: it tells us about the author, his peregrinations, his virtues and his foibles; it tells us what the book contains, and this very aptly, and finally it is written by a wonderfully resourceful pen. Each sentence ends with something unexpected - always delightfully so - and it is one more argument for an old conviction that you must take yourself in hand and begin to paint on a larger canvas. You have seldom given any of us the benefit of your gift of expression, and you must not disappoint us.

H.C. is in New Haven for his fortieth reunion. He came down Saturday night, and though he has gone to Rochester today, he is returning Tuesday. Have you seen his address in last week's number of the New England Medical Journal? It is one of the happiest things that he has done.

My dear John,

Sorry you & H.C. liked the reviews and have joined the band of bullies, including Hilda and some friends here, who are trying to make me author of me. The dean, beartin, is the worst. He won't recommend a rather desirable increase in my salary until my pen takes to sputtering into reg'lar. And I've just heard from Archie Culloch who also applies the goad.

So, I've been inspired to fill W.O.'s old fountain pen and am sacrilegiously writing this with it. Perhaps it may infect me with the Cacoethes scribendi, or writer's itch ??

Are there so few books, ithink you, in the world at this date that even a librarian, hard put to it to find shelfroom for them, must be expected to produce others ???

Maisie, 2nd youngest in her class, came head yesterday in the year's work. I used to do the same at school and I was the youngest. She came top in 5 out of 8 subjects, including MEMORY — and thereupon left her new straw hat in the cloak room shut up for the summer!

Dear Bill:

I am chagrined that I should have put you to so much trouble. I find the third volume of the facsimile reposing comfortably on my shelf along side the third volume of the original and the 'Neues Folge' has gone to you. I am having the third volume sent post-haste, but you need not hurry in returning the 'Neues Folge'; in fact, you have every reason to keep it after so stupid a blunder.

You ask about the date of the Zweiter Band, my copy bears the imprint 'Breslau, Verlag von Eduard Trewendt, 1847'.

In the future I shall address all parcels to The Osler Library, McGill University, etc. Your remarks about Mr. Osler Library and Dr. Francis Osler were most entertaining. I suppose you are the enigma of the Post Office authorities - long may you remain so!

Yours ever,

John

P. S. On Monday of this week, May 18th, vol. I of the second edition of the British Museum Catalogue (A to ~~A~~ GI) arrived. It is bound substantially in red and printed in the same format as the first edition. It is really a thing that you should have under your thumb and I think it would be a very wise investment for you to make on behalf of the Library. They promise roughly 8 volumes a year at £3 a volume to continue for a period of approximately 10 years. The problem of shelf-space will be very little greater than that for the S.G.L. It will be the greatest bibliographical compilation of printed books ever issued. You will be interested by the way in which they have handled the Adams' in the first volume - (Charles Francis), (Charles Francis), the "younger", (Charles Francis), Head of the Department of Physics, Detroit Central High School. etc !

My dear Bill:

I am so glad to have the reference to the Bulletin of the International Association of Medical Museums. I remembered that Dr. Streeter had given an appreciation of Leoniceas in print and I wrote him only the other day to try and find out where it was, but he gave no reply. Of course, I should have gone to you, knowing that you would be much more likely to know where it was than he! There is plenty of time to add the reference and I shall do so when the proofs come. I am sending it to the New England Journal of Medicine.

I had imagined that you met Dusser de Barenne when you were in New Haven and that you knew him when he stayed with us in Oxford. I am so sorry to have informed you of his great sorrow when you had not the foggiest notion of who he was! Surely I told about his coming from Utrecht to develop, as a research professor here, an institute of experimental neurology. He is a remarkable fellow. Remind me sometime to tell you more concerning him.

My dear Bill,

Many thanks for your note of the 9th. I am so glad that the facsimile of Janus is acceptable to the Library, but my benefaction is not without its drawback. I find that the facsimile includes a Neuefolge which I do not possess in the original. I have also ascertained that the Neuefolge can be bought separately in facsimile. I am therefore presenting you with the first three volumes in the pious hope that you will be able to secure, through Swets and Zeitlinger,* the supplementary Band. It seems that a good many copies of the facsimile have actually been sold without the supplement. How I happened to secure it is a mystery. Steiner was in the office on Saturday and did not understand why he had not received it in his set.

We are all much upset by Mrs. Dusser de Barenne's sudden death last Friday. You remember that he came over here from Holland with his family last September, and had only just begun to adjust himself to the new surroundings. It is a great tragedy that he should now be so overwhelmed.

Yours sincerely,

John

Dear Bill:

You are a sleuth! I had had moments of wondering about the name Nivernoys, but it had not occurred to me that it was a Rabelaisian archaism! I shall make it clear in the note, and once more offer you my warm thanks.

Fancy receiving two letters from you in the same day. Maisie's remark about Arnold's name convulsed me. It reminded me of the story of the man driving a cart with a load of manure who was asked by a lunatic what he was going to do with it. "It is to put on my strawberries", was the reply. The lunatic promptly added, "I put sugar and cream on mine and they say I am crazy!"

My dear Bill:

As usual, you have been kindness itself and I thoroughly approve and am infinitely grateful for all of the suggestions which you make on the Elizabethan Club ms. You have examined it with microscopic care and enriched it enormously. I am not quite sure what conventions one should adopt in transcribing Elizabethan texts; in general I followed your practice of underling contractions, but Tucker-Brooke assured me that I ought to observe 'u's' rather than to transliterate them as 'v's'. I see the weight, however, of your objection and I think it is wise. The reference to Elyot's prose as being "the most important link between English of the time of Chaucer and English of Francis Bacon" is paraphrased from Croft's [sic] "Life of Elyot" in his edition of The Gouvernour [sic]; in his rendering of Elyot's text he has adopted his spelling throughout, 'u's' and all. I felt, in the circumstances, that it was best to follow that precedent.

With regard to your Rabelaisian question, I will send you Nivernoys and Mollet under separate cover to inspect and return [sic]! Your comments about Rabelais are most helpful.

My secretary did this !!

I saw W.O.'s copy of Napier's Logarithms, 1614, with a long note in W.O.'s handwriting. It is still preserved at the Library of the Elizabethan Club and apparently much treasured. I have not, however, seen the ms. of Burton - I shall find out where it is, the next time I am there. I was glad to have your notation concerning 'contubernium', and I was relieved that it implied a dwelling-together, or co-habitation in the un-legal, un-quasi marital sense.

That nice fellow, Larkey, and his attractive wife appeared in New Haven last night. He, as you know, is Professor of Medical History out at the University of California and is really magnificently fitted (glorioso imbutus) for the post. He is an M.D. and spent four years at Oxford in the 'English Schools'. He is now on his way abroad to buy some books for their medical library. He says that Crummer is very ill with myocarditis, nephritis and extensive oedema, and that he plans to leave his books to Michigan!

Dear Bill:

Your delightful letter written on Monday told me a great deal that I was eager to know. I felt it in my heart that the question would be put to you at Baltimore. I suppose you were wise to act as you did, but it must have required great strength of mind; in any case, you can be assured that we love and admire you for your decision and your loyalty. I wonder what will ultimately come of ~~the~~ of the chair. I cannot believe that H.C. will fake it. It would be the end of him -

The paper at the Elizabethan Club seemed to go off very well last evening, and I cannot tell you how grateful I am for the reference. It was one of only two or three new points that I was able to make concerning the humanistic group and I moved a warm vote of thanks for your generosity in passing on the reference.

With this I am enclosing a carbon copy of the paper for your critical perusal. Would you cast your eye over the rendering of Champier's description of ~~the~~ Leonicensus on page 4 - it is really quite an exciting passage. I was a little taken aback when Tucker-Brooke introduced me by the remark that the last physician to address the Elizabethan

My dear Bill,

You have anticipated our bread-and-butter letter. Thank you so much for sending me the note about Bentley's Boyle sermon from Blackwells Catalogue 285. I have sent for it as it appears to be an unrecorded edition.

You and Hilda were kindness itself when we were at Montreal. It was a great joy to both of us to have been able to see so much of you, and we both deeply appreciate all that you did for us, and we are awaiting your trip impatiently.

With this I am sending the reprint I spoke to you about on the history of the experimental method. All suggestions gratefully received!

Yours ever,

John

My dear John:

I have received sheets 81-103 of the proofs and your letter of March 14. You are altogether too grateful to me and far too pessimistic about these proofs. The mishap at no. 103 might happen to anyone, even a Latinist. Homer nods. I suspected Gibson's hand in the matter of the sigs. Don't worry about them. If he thinks they aren't essential, they aren't.

You seem to have stopped short of the last paragraph of my letter. There is ever so much more to praise than to criticise, and it is a fine job you have done.

I enclose the copy of Baglivi's R.S. letter.

Love to you both.

24.iii.31. W.W.F.*

What a marvelous man you are! Your reading of the proofs of my bibliography of Boyle places me eternally in your debt. You have seen things that no other born mortal would ever have seen, and you ^{also} have collected errors that, had they appeared, would have glared at every one and overwhelmed me with humiliation. The blunder in No. 103 fills my soul with terror. When I wrote you on the 4th I was mystified by your casual reference and missed the point of it entirely. You are quite right in assigning the fragment to the 'Effluvia'. If you doubt my sanity altogether (you have every reason to doubt my Latinity) perhaps I could explain that these two little Bologna editions, which I never heard of before, arrived a few days before we left Oxford and Hill and I renumbered all the cards on account of them (for about the tenth time!).

Your various comments about signatures and contents make me wish that I had had the backbone to stand up against Gibson and Hill in giving everything by signatures. For every entry on all the cards I had given both pagination and signatures, and Gibson said that this was entirely contrary to the regulations of the Bibliographical Society and that they could not well print it if I insisted. I did insist, however, only to reach a compromise of giving unnumbered pages by signatures and numbered pages by the 17th century printers' erratic enumeration. I am most unhappy about it because in revising the cards many of the blank leaves, previously indicated by signatures, were struck out by Gibson and Hill after I had left Oxford. I am not turning my back on all the services that they have rendered, for they revised all of the cards, making many corrections, but in so doing they could not restrain their enthusiasm for Bodleian conventions. I shall transfer the majority of your corrections on to my final copy and send your queries, most of which are the outcome of Bodleian "simplifications", to Hill for settlement before the proofs go in.

I am glad you raised the question about the Geneva editions. They were, are, and will continue to be the bane of my existence. New issues keep turning up with cancelled title-pages and bearing odd dates. I have dealt with them briefly among the collected editions which you will find enclosed with this letter. All the galleys have now come through, and I am able to see the whole thing more or less in perspective.

I have moments of wishing that I had never embarked upon it, but ~~yet~~ I find myself led by the nose; and then, I felt I must do some kind of penance for having enjoyed Oxford too much! I had never before been told of the reason for the old Roman imprint which the Genevan printers used for export. How delightful. I shall certainly incorporate this in the notes.

I can well imagine how much time you have been spending over the proofs and for this, and for everything else, my love and my thanks.

Yours ever,

John

P.S. I am delighted to hear that you have succeeded in deciphering Baglivi's letter to the Royal Society. Do please send me a copy, and I am quite sure that Mr. Cowle would like one at Burlington House.

March 19, 1931.

Dear Bill:

Many thanks for your transcription of Baglivi's letter to the Royal Society. It is a most interesting document and I think you ought sometime to render it into William and Mary's best English.

I hope you will not find the last Boyle too devastating.

Yours ever,

A handwritten signature, likely "John", written in dark ink. The signature is stylized, with a large, sweeping initial letter that curves around the rest of the name.

From J. F. Fulton March 14 1931.

EMILE HILAIRE AMAGAT was born on the 2d of January, 1841, at St. Satur, a village in the arrondissement de Sancerre, in the Département du Cher. It was at first his intention to be a technical chemist, but he abandoned this career almost at the very outset in preference of one in pure science.

For several years Amagat was préparateur of the celebrated Berthelot at the Collège de France. After this (between 1867 and 1872) he was called to Switzerland, where he served as professor at the Lycée de Fribourg. It was there that Amagat completed his thèse de doctorat, being formally honored with this degree in Paris in 1872.

Returning to France, he was successively made professor at the Lycée d'Alençon, à l'École Normale Spéciale de Cluny, and in 1877 was appointed professor of physics in the Faculté Libre des Sciences of Lyons. In this institution, then merging into active existence, he created the department of physics, and in it conducted his most famous researches.

He left Lyons in 1891 for Paris, where he resides at present in the official position of examineur à l'École Polytechnique.

Amagat has been correspondent of the Institut de France (Académie des Sciences, Section de Physique) since 1889. He was elected a foreign member of the Royal Society of London in 1897, and of the Royal Society of Edinburgh in the same year. He is honorary member of the Société Hollandaise des Sciences, of the Société Scientifique de Bruxelles, of the Philosophical Society of Manchester, etc. etc.

333 Cedar St.,
New Haven, Conn.

Dear John:

I am sending back the Boyle proofs (sheets 1-80, up to no. 218) by this or the next mail, under separate cover. Please don't be alarmed at the amount of red ink I've put on them. It is largely suggestions, counsels of perfection, which you may, but I hope won't quite, ignore.

BUT you must deal with no. 103. I like the cool remark in yours of the 4th, 'I hope you have straightened out the difficulty with Nos. 103 and 109' !! I'll put it here in type, in case my writing is ^{too} illegible. It is the only bad slip; and I beseech you to focus your Latinity (it needn't be Magdalenian) on the title printed under 103. It is evidently 'Fire and Flame ponderable' and has nothing to do with 'Relation betwixt Flame and Air', but is part of 'Effluvioms', the very edition of which you, under 109, where it belongs, that 'No copy has yet come to light' !

While we are dis-cussing that same ruddy sheet 46, let me transcribe here what I have written in the upper right corner of it with reference to the end of your Note to no. 101: 'Your memory fails you. Our copy, Bibl. Osler. 7679, which you not only saw but gave to us and helped me to collate, has k-x before K2, in the original binding. See the entry in the Addenda of the Catal. The collation is there, in black & white, with you as donor, so you must note the exception here.'

A few general criticisms, especially concerning the earlier entries: In the collations the number of leaves plus pp. does not always correspond to the sigs., and sometimes you give only the faulty, not the real, number of pp.

In the Contents, when the pagination is, as usual, erratic, sigs. as well as pp. are almost necessary. Also every page should be accounted for. In nearly every description you seem to ignore blank pages, and the reader is left to wonder whether it is safe to assume such a page to be blank, or whether it has been overlooked. Even versos of titles, or at least sub-titles, should be mentioned.

Besides, you quote e.g. length of head as exaggeration which describes all the 14 intruding spines as pitchforked
in between Ks & K2

~~not checked by speed type machine~~
Dr. J.F.F. March 12/31 - 2
letter 1

However, I have carefully compared all the 18 Boyle editions here with your descriptions (Nos. 15, 18, 26, 30, 44, 50, 57, 58, 71, 101, 116, 146, 159, 166, 180, 189, 194 & 197) and I must confess that I have found only one of your unmentioned versos (No. 26, p. [42]) to contain print - in this case an 'Advertisement'. It may well be blank in your copy, but how is one to know?

Your very scanty treatment of the many 1680 Colonia Allobrogum editions mystifies me (Nos. 24, 32, 63, 76, 90, 95, 100, 112, 121). If they really are new printings, why no collation, contents, &c.? The Genevan printers, by the way, used that old Roman imprint for export, especially to Catholic markets, where it savoured less of heresy than the name 'Geneva'!

So much for criticism, which was your object in sending me the proofs. There is really much more to praise. It is a tremendous piece of labour, which needed doing, and you've done it splendidly. How the deuce you've managed it, with all the other things you've been doing meanwhile, I can't understand. Your Preface and your introductions to the various works supply exactly the right amount of bio- to leaven, a la Osler, the biblio-graphy, and give one an appreciation of Boyle that is not, I think, to be had from his biographies. And John Beattie, to whom I lent the proofs yesterday, agrees. He is back at work, with his fractured thigh in a splint.

Send me the rest of the sheets.

We are looking forward to seeing you and L. on the 8th.

Yours ever,

Dr. J.F.F.

(Dr. W. F. -)

P.S. I have deciphered Baglivi's draft of his letter acknowledging his election to the Royal Society, 1698. Do you think the Secretary of the R.S. (and you) would like to have copies? I think he told us that there was no trace of the original in their files.

Dear Bill:

Many thanks for your letter of the 26th. I hope you have straightened out the difficulty with Nos. 103 and 109 in the Boyle proofs. I was not quite sure from your letter just what the difficulty was, so you must be sure to indicate it on the proof.

The paper on the experimental method is not a scholarly piece of work at all, and it is very brief so you must not expect too much. I hope to be able to send it to you within a few weeks. I have just had another delightful letter from Jones who proposes editing Sprat. He has asked me for a catalogue of my books on the Royal Society which is a rather large order, - at least my Secretary thinks so. Will send you a copy

Yours very sincerely,

John

Many thanks for your delightful letter of February 19th. I am infinitely beholden to you for the quotation from Charleton's 'Ternary' in which electricity is used. I had paged through the book many times attempting to run it down, but without success.

I am so glad you like the Boyle proofs and I hope you will continue to criticize them freely. Your eagle eye will undoubtedly pick up many things that we have missed.

A fellow named Jones out in Washington University is contemplating a reprint of Sprat's History of the Royal Society.

My dear John:

We are delighted to hear that you and Lucia will arrive on April 8th, and we will do our best to keep Lucia entertained.

X I have just received a reprint of Howell's paper but have not read it yet. I believe there is also something good on Sir T. B. in his book called "Shakespeare's Silences", which I must get. I shall look through the "ternary" for electricity.

I got your tremendous proofs. It is going to be a splendid piece of work. What a Hercules you are! Did I ever acknowledge the "History of Physiology"? another excellent little masterpiece.

With regard to the proofs, I have so far put my corrections and suggestions in pencil, with the idea that they could be rubbed out if you needed to use that set for further corrections. I can easily ink them over in red.

I am afraid I have not got very far with it, but I have been rather distraught this week with various matters, chiefly house-hunting. We are in a horrible state of indecision, the main question being a most desirable little house in a most desirable locality at a very undesirable price with no prospects of a car or other trimmings, or else the suburbs with appurtenances.

In any case we shall not be moving before you come.

Love to you both.

As ever

Will.

I had intended when I sent you the Boyle proofs to suggest that you put your corrections and suggestions in some different colored ink, either red or blue, so that we can distinguish them from our own. I hope you understand that the proofs sent did not have all of the corrections transferred that we have made on our set.

Lucia and I expect to be in Montreal for the meeting of the Federation of Biological Societies April 8th to 11th, and as Lucia disapproves of attending scientific meetings I fancy that she will descend on you for the greater part of the time. She is most thrilled at the idea of seeing the Library and I foresee that you will have a good deal of trouble keeping her in tow. We are going out to St. Paul for a week beforehand and will arrive in Montreal on Wednesday, the 8th. We are planning to take rooms at the Mt. Royal which will be fairly near the centre of things, and if I remember the geography of Montreal, it is not far from your apartment.

Yours ever,

John

P.S. Do you know about A. C. Howell's paper on Sir Thomas Browne's knowledge of languages? Also, can you tell me where in Charleton's translation of Van Helmont's A ternary of paradoxes he uses the word "electricity" - I have searched my copy from cover to cover without finding it.
