In The 1502 Walnut Street note-book.

Evidently goes back to Montreal days.

Inference

E.Y.D. leave the bench and appear at the Bar to give an account of your account, remembering that sincerity is a moral duty, more important than infallibility. The one may be reached the other sought for. But I hear you murmur, 'who can be a judge of his own character'? Will not a man's estimate of himself vary from day to day, depending very much on his humour.

Some account of my experiences in life may be of interest and there is much in ~~the same~~ Benvenuto Cellini's remark that it is a sort of duty in a man who has succeeded in life.

"The other cheek". A sermon preached before a Society of Rumours in Convention at Caughnauga, 1873 by E.Y.D.

Boswell took seven years in writing The Life.

“A Biography, two vols. and full-blown, could not save him from the oblivion which he deserved.”
