Dear Dr Osler,

The Vice-Chancellor has suggested to me that I might write to you in support of the invitation which he has just sent you. This I do with the most earnest hope that you will see your way to come here.

This post affords facilities for work, practical medicine and research, which must be unique in this country.

To speak from the laboratory point of view we are most anxious to have in the head of our School one who has had experience in research such as would enable him to organise the school with the view of expanding in this direction. There is no one who could do this as you would and I think you would see the result of your work in a very short time. You know, e.g. of our desire to overtake Neurology and Psychology. There is such a wealth of material here and the appointment of a man of narrow sympathies would be a calamity.

I can promise you a most hearty welcome.

Yours sincerely,

T. Lorrain Smith.
