Dear H.V.,

Sorry to hear that you have been knocked up. Your frontal sinus attack reminds me of my horrid attack of influenza with the same complication, which I hope in your case will disappear, as it has in mine, promptly.

Do let us have that Alkapton paper for the Quarterly Journal, unless you think it ought to go in the Archives for Internal Medicine. I do wish you would think of a trip over here this summer. You could have a quiet room on the top of the house, breakfast in bed, and browse about my library and the Bodleian to your heart's content. Do think it over. Even a couple of weeks would be good for you!

Give my love to your mother and to Frances. I suppose the children are just as delightful as ever. Revere has just got back from Scotland, where he has been after his beloved fish. He passed his entrance examination, fortunately, and comes up to Christ Church this autumn.

Sincerely Yours,

W.O.
