

gone home.

We know the aching void that will be left - the deep sense of loss that can never be replaced in this world - but we know too that for your dear mother all is gain - joy and happiness that nothing can mar. ^{W.D.} If we could but look for one moment at that 27 Aug. 1917.

My dear Claude.

Our hearts have been much with you all during these weeks of trial and watching but especially so since Conrad's telegram on Saturday told us that the ma had come and your dear mother had that scene of bliss into which she has entered - it would surely make our loss seem small in contrast with her gain.

I had fully intended to be with you to day but I could not leave two almost helpless ones alone.

Rob is well but not able to do for himself this mother had such a sharp attack that he had to get in the Doctor at 3 o'clock on Sunday morning It seemed to be acute indigestion with severe cramps in the feet

She is convalescing & I hope after another day or two will be able to get out again - So far malted milk is her strongest diet.

I trust you all are well & that you may be sustained and comforted of the Lord himself in your great loss.

With our united love & sympathy.
