McGill University,

Montreal, June 17, 1868

My dear Sir,

In answer to your kind invitation to lecture before the Peabody Institute, I beg to say that at present I am not in a condition to give any positive answer. I am at present a candidate for an important educational position in Scotland; and if successful shall not be in this country next winter. I may learn the decision in a few days, ~~and~~ ^{or} probably not until next month. In these circumstances you must not count on me for the present; but if my candidature should be successful, and if I find that I can make arrangements to visit Baltimore next winter I shall inform you in case your list should not be filled.

Sincerely yours
W. Dawson
