My Dear Dr Dawson

I am ashamed to acknowledge that I got your letter last month, asking about certain recent discoveries at Solonites in reference to Palaeolithic man and the domesticated horse.

I did not reply, because I had not seen the book you referred to; and hoped to do so.

This I unfortunately have still failed to accomplish,

I have only the 1868 vol of the Congress of Prehistoric Archaeology; and nobody in this province knows of any other. pity the sorrows of a poor man starving for lack of books!

I have been unusually hard pressed with extra work, so that the Texas holidays came to an end without my finding one holiday hour. Your letter said
"Would you, at your leisure, give me information in " had I had the information, I should not have waited for the leisure. Even now it seems a shame to intrude on the time

of a busy man with a note which when you have read, it is simply a confession of utter ignorance.

But it has been a burden on my conscience that your letter should have had no answer.

I am glad to see that you are roused to war with ultramontane Rome. She is intolerant as ever;

and will quench the light wherever she is not effectually
resisted.

Faithfully yours

Dan. Wilcox
