MISSIONS AND CIVILIZATION.

There were some remarks made at the missionary meeting, in connection with the Anglican Diocesan Synod, of Wednesday evening last, which, it is to be hoped, will not fail to produce the desired effect on those who heard them or read them. The decrease of the Protestant population in the Eastern Townships, to which the Hon. W. W. Lynch called attention, is a fact of very serious importance. A quarter of a century ago there was no portion of the province which gave such promise of the growth of a great British community, yet for years past the English-speaking householders have been selling out and disappearing from the places that knew them. What is the cause of the exodus? In what direction does the migration mainly flow? And by what class of people are the vacancies thus created filled up? These are questions to which it is of the utmost interest that we should have correct and definite answers. In reply to the first two of them it may, we believe, be confidently stated that the opening up of the Northwest will account to a large extent for that movement of population. The clergy of the various districts concerned could, doubtless, confirm this view, and it would certainly be well if it were customary for those in charge of parishes or missions to keep a record, as far as possible, of the peregrinations of their flocks. That very many of the families which have left those once so exclusively English-speaking counties have passed beyond the limits of Canada we see no reason to believe. Some of the young men may have done so, but, we hope, not any very great proportion of them. As long as they remain in the Dominion, the loss to the community whom their departure tends to deplete and impoverish is, to some degree, made up for. But, when it is considered that provincialism and nationalism in the narrow sense are evils with which we have especially to contend, it is impossible to view this thinning out of the English-speaking population of Lower Canada with anything but regret. The sooner something like race equilibrium is attained in all the provinces, the better it will be for the Dominion as a whole. Our French-Canadian fellow-citizens have begun to spread over Ontario and their presence there will do much, we trust, to remove injurious prejudice and to bring about that unity of sentiment without which we can never be a nation. But it has often been to us a matter of surprise that our statesmen—especially those more directly engaged in immigration work—did not do more to build up the British element in this province. Again and again we have urged the advisability of laying before the better class of English farmers, seeking a home beyond sea, the advantages offered by the Townships, where farms on which all the pioneer operations had been completed could be obtained at so moderate a price. We are sure that the Anglican clergy could turn their knowledge and energies to useful account if they represented to the Church Emigration societies in the United Kingdom the real state of the case. In filling up the gaps to which Mr. Lynch referred they would be really accomplishing a missionary work of the utmost importance to Canada and their own church.

Associated therewith is the making of due provision for the spiritual needs of newly settled regions, such as those of which the Rev. Mr. Naylor gave so graphic and not unhopeful account. In the performance of that great task—the fulfilment of the supreme command of the church's Head—they should receive a far more generous support from the laity than that on which they have hitherto had to depend. What is such a sum as $2.80 per family for the church people of a wealthy city like Montreal? How far would that pittance go in supplying amusement for a household in even moderate circumstances? Of course, in the city there are many and various claims on people's purses, and several of them may be equally urgent. Local charities must be sustained. The clergyman must be paid his salary. The children must be educated. The doctor's bill must be met. But, when full allowance has been made for these and other calls on the private treasury, it must still be acknowledged that the showing for missions is sadly below the mark. In the country, where the clergyman can hardly plead for missions without the risk of depriving himself of a share of his modicum, the average is still lower, only $1.10 per household. Such a contribution from the rural church people of the diocese may well call forth complaints, and prompt enquiry as to the cause of its meagreness. The true cause is, as some of the speakers hinted, a lack of interest in missionary labor and of appreciation of the benefits that it brings to religion and to society. If religion is the zealous handmaid of the best civilization—as all Christians believe—then it should be promoted and sustained with earnestness and liberality. The future of Canada depends on the foundation now laid in the North and Northwest. If the pioneers are left without religious ministrations and their children allowed to grow up godless and rude and ignorant, can we look for fruits worthy of a civilized and Christian community? It is, in fact, the duty not merely of the church member, but of the citizen who loves his country, to give these home missions a loyal and generous support.

AN IMPERIAL GEOLOGICAL UNION.

In our notice of the proceedings of the Royal Society of Canada, at its late meeting, attention was called to the proposal of Sir William Dawson for the organization of an Imperial union of geological surveys and societies, and to the report of the committee appointed to take it into consideration. Professor Huxley had in his presidential address of 1885 before the Royal society advocated some plan of scientific federation coterminous with the British Empire. Prof. Stokes had followed up the suggestion in his address, as president, in the succeeding year. The council of the society had then dealt with the subject as one which might fitly come before the world of science under the auspices of so distinguished and representative a body. In his presidential address before the British association at Birmingham last year, Sir William Dawson referred to the remarks of Professors Huxley and Stokes and to the proposed action of the Council of the Royal society, and urged the claims of geology as furnishing, for reasons stated, a readier and firmer basis for such a union than any other department of science. In February last, Sir William addressed a letter to Professor Stokes in which, after having reminded him of the steps which had so far been taken towards the end in view, he summed up the considerations which, in his opinion, rendered a union of the geologists of the Empire desirable. First of all, he indicated the difficulties (as shown by the report of the last meeting of the International Congress of Geologists) in the way of any general agreement as to classification, nomenclature and mapping—difficulties great if not insuperable, but which, being largely due to difference of language and habits of thought, would not affect a geological union within the Empire. Ultimately it might embrace all English speaking countries, and its primarily merely Imperial character should be regarded, not as obstructing, but as aiding the more comprehensive scheme. Sir William then pointed out the exceptional facilities which the British Empire possessed for researches in geology and physical geography—Canada alone comprising half of North America and having most favorable exposures of some of the most important rocks,—while India, Australasia, South Africa and the dependencies in the Pacific and Indian oceans also offered marked advantages for the study of other series. The exploration of many regions even beyond the British domain was carried on, moreover, by English or English-speaking geologists and observers, and there was, therefore, every reason to hope that the proposed union would overcome the difficulties that had stood in the way of the fruitful cooperation of European geologists and might lay a broad foundation of geological fact, classification, nomenclature and representation, which would ultimately be adopted by other countries as far as local diversities and differences of language might permit." It was, moreover, taken for granted that the Geological union would be accompanied by a like combination of other departments of investigation.

In March last, Sir William Dawson's letter to Prof. Stokes was submitted to the council of the Royal Society of Canada, and a committee, consisting of Sir W. Dawson, Dr. Selwyn and Abbe Laflamme, was appointed to consider and report on the proposal. The report presented at the last general meeting, fully approved of the plan of union and recommended that it should be aided by the Geological survey, the Royal Society and possibly by the universities of Canada. The Royal Society was also asked to empower the council to continue its committee, to select delegates to represent itself in the event of a preliminary conference being called in London and to invite the affiliated societies, prosecuting geological work, to take similar action. as the report is now in the hands of all societies interested in the subject with which it is concerned, it is not unlikely that they will join the Royal Society in supporting a plan which, it is believed, would promote the cause of scientific progress in Canada, and increase our prestige in the eyes of the world.

In a critical article yesterday the Herald alluded scornfully to the "GAZETTE litterateurs." It is presumed that the writer meant litterateurs, which is a French word, signifying men of letters, that is, those able to spell.

A new correspondent writes that other local papers have appropriated his telegraphic despatches to the GAZETTE without crediting either the writer or the paper, and asks: "Is this the proper caper?" It may not be the proper, but it is the regular "caper." By and bye our new young man will have more experience in the ways of enterprising journalism and will cease to object or wonder at such little matters, which are of every day occurrence.

It is a very small business that the United States officials have entered upon along the Ontario frontier, as detailed in a despatch from Lockport, N. Y., to-day. Threatening laborers with deprivation of work in the United States because they reside in Canada is an act that has no justification in anything this country has done, whatever excuse the Americans may set up, for there is nothing in the laws of the Dominion requiring domicile in Canada by those who come to our shores to earn a livelihood. Those of the United States, on the contrary, are construed to mean that Canadians may not labor in that country without having a residence there. This interpretation was first heard of in Detroit, in which city a number of residents of Windsor find employment, as do a number of Detroiters in Windsor. The former have been ordered by their employers to move across the river, and the incident at Suspension bridge indicates that the same thing will be enacted wherever similar conditions exist. The Wiman boomsters might find food for reflection in this incident. Other Canadians certainly will.

"Best prize," offered to the two students who have most distinguished themselves by their application and their success in the study of the English language, awarded to Vital Larose, student of Belles Lettres, and Onesime Pare, student of syntax.

THE INUNDATION COMMITTEE.

The Tenders for Iron Work—The Revetment Wall—The Clay for the Dyke.

A meeting of the Special Committee on Inundations was held yesterday afternoon, when there were present Ald. Grenier (chairman), Hamelin, Donovan, Wilson, Laurent and Prefontaine.

The CHAIRMAN read a letter from Ald. Archibald explaining that he could not be present, as he was presiding at the Panet Street school.

The CHAIRMAN read a letter from Mr. Whitney, secretary of the Harbor Commissioners, stating that the commissioners were quite willing to let the city take up the flagstone pavement on the revetment wall, provided the city replace it after five years and be responsible for all damage done.

It was resolved to accept Mr. Whitney's proposal.

It was resolved to lay the flagstones taken up in parts of the flooded districts.

It was resolved to write to the Government at Ottawa asking for a copy of the charter of the St. Gabriel levee as passed.

In reference to the clay for the dyke the City Surveyor said he would need 150 train loads of 25 cars each, and as he could not block up the line on the wharf he suggested it should be brought to the Canadian Pacific railroad depot by train and removed in carts.

This was agreed to.

The City Surveyor reported in favor of centrifugal pumps, and he was authorized to procure estimates for two centrifugal pumps of 1,000,000 gallons per hour capacity.

Nine tenders were received for iron work, but not being extended they were referred to the City Surveyor to extend and report on them.

The committee then adjourned until Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

POLICE COURT.

Liquor Cases—An Interesting Larceny Case.

In this court yesterday Angele Henault, No. 610 German street, was fined $95 and costs or three months for selling liquor without a license. J. B. Lalumiere, 1230 Wolfe street, was fined $30 and costs or three months for keeping liquor for sale without a license. F. X. Gareau, corner of Beaudry and Ontario streets, was fined $95 and costs or three months for selling liquor without a license.

Etienne Tremblay was charged with stealing milk from Mr. St. Amour, farmer, Coteau Landing. It appeared the prisoner had been in the habit of milking the farmer's cows without his knowledge. The accused pleaded guilty and was remanded. Felix Sauve, charged with breaking into and stealing from the Grand Trunk cars, was committed to the Court of Queen's Bench. The preliminary investigation into the charge of conspiracy against Michael Minogue was continued.

Mary Jane Fox, 32, and George Weston, 26, laborer, were charged with suspicion of larceny. It appeared that while Constable Hill was on duty at the Bonaventure depot the previous evening, he noticed the male, accompanied by the prisoner, purchasing tickets, and at that moment the prosecutor, Henry Nelson, came up and accused the woman of robbing him. He said she was his wife and had stolen $1,000 from him, and was eloping with the male prisoner to Buffalo. Constable Hill arrested them both, and, on being searched, $1,077 was found on the female prisoner. The woman, who used to keep a pea soup stand on St. Ann's market, denies that Nelson is her husband, and says that though she was married to him here he has another wife living in the States. She further states that she has been supporting him all along, and that he never works and, consequently, never has any money except what she gave him. She was tired of supporting him, and was going away with her own money. His Honor discharged both the prisoners, and ordered the money to remain in the High Constable's hands until the Superior court decides who is the rightful owner.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

THE DOMINION PALACE.

The May Adams Burlesque company will have an entire change of programme at the above theatre next week.

THEATRE ROYAL.

"Across the Atlantic" will be seen for the last time this season to-day. Next week one of Montreal's favorite actors will be seen again, Mr. J. H. Gilmour appearing in the "Galley Slave." A good company is promised and an enjoyable production of the play may be expected.

ALMOST AN ACCIDENT.

There was almost a serious accident at the corner of Bleury and Craig streets yesterday afternoon. One street car was coming along from St. Antoine street and another from Bleury, and each of the drivers stirred up his horses to get past the junction first. The consequence was that they arrived there at the same moment, and the driver of the Bleury street car had to apply the brakes, and even then grazed the other car. One of the routes should be given the right of way, or an accident will certainly occur.
