

Cranford
Wolpelt, N. S., Feb. 3/80

My dear Sir

I am reading, with much pleasure and profit, your volume on the "Origin of the world".
At p. 66 I have met with a difficulty, which I must ask you to remove. You have omitted the second clause of Gen. 1:4 - "And God divided the light from the darkness". I presume you had a reason for the omission, but I cannot divine what it is. I find the clause in the Septuagint, the Vulgate, and the Syriac version. Whether there is any various reading that justifies the omission, I cannot tell. You will oblige me by an explanation,

I register the readings of the Thermometer every day at 8, A. M.

It did not reach zero this year till yesterday, this morning it stood at 4, and the weather is comparatively mild. Kind regards to Mrs. Dawson, in which my daughter joins.

Yours truly

J. M. Cramp

D. Dawson

