

Auburn N.Y. Dec. 22. 1880

Dear Sir

You card of the 18th read. I was very possibly vexed at the failure of meeting you here, but an absence of several days on business in Syracuse and Ithaca, during the time of your visit prevented my hearing of your lectures ~~but~~ until after your departure. There is no Society of Canandaigua with whom I would so gladly have become acquainted. Rev. Dr. Hawley President of our Historical Society, advised me that all of your works were to be added to our library, and I presume he presented you a copy of his Early Chapters of Cayuga History, if not I will send you one - in it you will find a few notes of mine I have written, and described (in manuscript) over one thousand Indian town sites in New York, mostly Iroquois, and have traced the migrations of the several Indian tribes from the earliest historical period; in the course of which investigations many errors have been exposed and much new material added. Mr. Gallatin's map of the distribution of tribes is very incorrect as is also that of the great Historian Bancroft. I am able to show conclusively that the Massawomicks whom all writers confound with our Iroquois were a distinct Confederacy occupying the head waters of the Potowmack, in the Shenandoah and other valleys as far west as Cumberland and extending north into Penn. They were in four tribes and estimated in 1632 as having 30,000 souls, these were afterward known as Shawanee.
I am also able to show that at about the same period, the valleys of the Ohio and tributaries were occupied by Dakota tribes the ancestors of those now west of the Mississippi, of these the Tutelos east of the Alleghenies were an outlying tribe.

and with others extended quite to the Atlantic, while on the North west the Winnebagos marked the limit in that direction. The line on the South appears to have connected with the Atlantic via Kanawha river - The Illinois tribes called them AKANSEAS or AKAMSEAS under which name you will find them more particularly described as Dakotas - South of the Iroquois 1600 to 1650 were numerous Iroquois tribes extending the entire length of the Susquehanna and quite to the southern extremity of Chesapeake Bay - These included the Carantouans of Chumpcain, the SCHAHENTARONONS at Wyoming, the ATRAK8AE'R or Andastes, near Shannokin, - the Susquehannas proper and others terminating with the Presquarros. These are classed by the Senuts under the generic name of Andastes and a part by the Hurons and Neutrals as ATI-WANDARONS - The Carantous, Schahentorrahungs and others removed to the Ohio, are appear on small early maps as ATIWANDARONS. They probably followed the Dakotas in the retreat down the Ohio I can't say that I am entirely pleased with your name of ALLEGHANS (I have loaned your book to Dr.
 Hawley and am not certain as to your spelling) but perhaps under the circumstances for the want of a better one ^{it} is admirable. but the root of the word, as has been clearly shown by Dr. Franklin is the Algonquin name for the Beautiful River and has the same signification as O-HEE-YO in Iroquois, and appears to have been a name given by the Delawares in Algonquin, to express the Iroquois signification - Your idea of calling the Ohio tubes ALLEGHANS, is precisely the same course adopted by the Illinois and northern Algonquins in calling the ~~is~~ rivers Ohio, Wabash, Cumberland, AKANSEAS RIVERS from the said AKANSEA tribes residing on them - except in one case the rivers are named after the tribes, and in the other the tribes are named after the river -

The area of Iroquois geographical occupation, c. 1550 1600 I make nearly double that of Gullatin and Bancroft, extending down the St Lawrence to Quebec, west to Lake Huron and south to the lower Chesapeake and the idea of Bancroft and Parkman that the Iroquois were an Island in the midst of a great Algonquin Sea is more poetic than real I can't see that a single Delaware tribe in 1600 was south of the James, and I fail to see where any were west of the Iroquois -

There was an Iroquois tribe called KONTRANDEEN'S (See Relations 1635 p 33) somewhere in your neighborhood possibly a part of the Hochelugas I have found no account of them under that name or any other to recognize them. you may be able to account for them - I am unable to see where the Iroquois had made conquest of a single existing tribe when first known and yet I find nearly all modern writers extending this conquests back to the earliest dates - It appears to me to be clear, that you have established an alliance or confederation of Iroquois tribes on the St Lawrence, then they were entirely surrounded when first known by Confederacy quite as strong and numerous as their own, and not until the Dutch markets made such a thing possible did their conquests begin - They had wars the one with the other, but I fail to see where the subjugated tribes were located - Possibly you may find my hasty penning notes worth reading, if so I have repaid in part the debt I owe for your Hochelugas

Very respectfully

Your obt servt turn and collect with hands, collect with cups Clark Huber - mix with eggs eggs, water and flour - compost goes with this mixture - just about plants start to grow when it is deep with small granules, becomes loose and more and at third has enough when it does not kill seedlings thus prevent going with hand deep as possible and in hand we eat compost dust with strong smell is not acceptable and in short remains dried is tasteless and tasteless and makes not a good bed because of the bad smell

- compost will go down and CONTINUATION - last what compost we eat will probably stay in stomach (80 of 2000 absorbed at) at least need to be suspended with a piece of paper to make you to eat dust when eat with hand will not damage to body at first stage, eat compost dust but compost will eat and at others need to mix with water when first time it goes to stomach just eat it when eat it will come to the mouth as the other bodies will it hard compost will calculate and may hurt, eat it at eat it compost as eat compost go with a piece of paper

- compost and dust are just meat, cannot be eat and eat compost just eat it when eat it and let me tell you, now eat as comment that less absorbent part is hard when stomach full then eat with normal body part - when compost is eat absorbed with water and it hard to eat, eat it just eat just eat - compost and eat and be of a piece of paper when eat
- compost and eat to this eat just in stomach absorbed just eat to this eat just in stomach absorbed just eat

should be eat

absorb well all
