Dear Dr Dawson

I fear you have come to the conclusion that letter writing is a lost art - with me - I almost think so myself - I get the College news for by an occasional letter from Mr Baynes and Mr Ramsay and am glad to hear that matters are moving on there in their accustomed accustomed course without any special jar or disturbance Two things have given me decided satisfaction the one is the selection of the three new governors - and the other that the University has not committed itself to any immediate action in the matter of admitting young women to the College Come in the same class with young men I entirely approve of your more cautious and

and safer view of the subject - I am an advocate for the highest intellectual of training of women, but have very ~~strong~~ grave doubts whether it should be by the curriculum followed by boys - and am opposed to the mixed classes -

I suppose you are, as you always ^{will} be, very busy - The arrangements for your absence, with the ordinary work - and the preparation for your meeting the Am. Scientific Assⁿ must be quite enough for two men instead of one - but but apart from the higher approbation which is not of this world you have the consolation and support of feeling that your numerous friends regard with admiration your useful and noble life - God grant that it may be long preserved — We are as you see still at Dawlish a charming little town leaving nothing to be desired in the way of climate beauty of landscape or convenience of living - My general health is much improved - The feet sometimes pretty troublesome — but I have entered on my 78th year and feel the feebleness of accumulated years - Mrs Day is well and joins me in affectionate remembrances to you and yours Yours & sincerely

Chas D Day
