

advise me? I devote much time to the R. S., but have little support.
The majority seem to prefer having matters their own way.

The matter of the Inspectors is a status quo. There is a feeling favourable to you, I judge from a Conversation with his Ministers, but how far it will go I cannot say. The question does not appear to have been considered a formal, so far as I can gather. I do not see you can do anything more than you have done. You may be sure, your son stands a good chance unless there is a strong political aspirant in the field. If this I cannot say.

Yours sincerely,
J. Dowdell

Received of

If I am more anxious about the Transactions than any one, as I am anxious to have them printed so that I may give vouchers to the Auditor for the money used, which is safe by an arrangement with him.

Yours,