Manchester,

Feb²⁴ 16th 1886.

Sir,

In view of the importance of Life Assurance and the desirability of commending its claims more earnestly to the community, I venture to ask whether you would be good enough to favour me with an expression of your opinion of its value from a moral or an economical point of view.

I write, not in the interest of any Assurance office, but purely with the view of passing upon the public, in a fresh and more pointed way than has hitherto been done, their duty in connection with Life Assurance.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant.

A. Arthur Reade

Sir John William Dawson, Esq
