

Pudsey

The North American Review,

3 East Fourteenth Street, New York.

april 22 '89

My dear Sir :-

The North American Review
intends to publish in an early no. a discussion of the question How far should a University control its students? and we have been promised contributions to it from the presidents of nearly all the leading colleges. In the absence of Mr. Rice, who is about to depart for his post as minister at St. Petersburg. I am resolved to inquire if you, also, will not lend your invaluable cooperation to the Symposium.

The article need not be long (say 1000 or 2000 words), and I may add, though sensible, the fact that you are not to be swayed by pecuniary considerations, that it will be paid for.

Have you any other subject in mind a which you would be willing to write for the Review? We can offer you a larger audience than any similar publication, our circulation now being about 40,000 copies a month, and in view of the influence you would have printed in our pages, we trust you may be persuaded to write Something more than this brief contribution to the Symposium.

Perhaps you may be willing to give us a paper embodying your later researches in the direction of "modern science in Bible lands", and any proposition you are good enough to make will receive my attention. I am, Yours Sir,

Faithfully yours,

William H. Ridding.

To Sir J. W. Dawson.