Sir J. W. Dawson

Dear Sir,

Will you allow one of your admirers to ask a favor of you?
I am having some polemics with the so-called Higher Critics. Before me, just now is Gen II, 5. "For the Lord God had not caused it to rain upon the earth and not a man to till the ground,"

Does this mean that there had been no rain up to the advent of man?

Your opinion will be accepted with much gratitude. Yours with highest esteem E. J. Peck

P.S

Did plants of the garden require rain and culture and others not?

As I know of no other way to pay for postage of return letter I inclose 10 cts.
