

Tract for Holy head

July 15, 1896

My dear Sir,

Your kind letter of June 19th arrived to me from Montreal reached me at this place to-day, and I write at once to plain the delay in replying,

Your offer is a tempting one and I shall consider what I can do and inform you in a day or two, at my true life, both time and ability to work are uncertain quantities; but the date you mention should give ample time and the subject is one on which I should like very much to say something more before I depart.

As to the length of an article, this should I think be determined by you. The subject is one as You are aware which might be treated either in a summary manner or at great length, and of this the Editor alone can rightly judge.

Another question is as to the limits assigned to the subject of Anthropology. The founded Prof G Prof Sarslaw Anthropology is a Science not very young defined and it has occupied itself outing with the character or classification of men but with questions as to their origin and antiquity as well

Perhaps Dr. Laidlaw could give some idea of the scope of his treatment which might serve as a guide Whatever limits he might assign to himself there
 me; but it would be preferable to know before hand. ^{Perhaps you will} ^{not} ^{mind} ^{me} ^{as} My address after Friday will be The Maples, Gordon Park, Park Lane, Bournemouth
