My dear Sir,

Referring to your kind letter of September last, I have now written an introductory article on the subject of "Robinson's men", and hope to have it copied out and mailed next week for your approval.

It will form I think an interesting opening to the subject, and may occupy between three and four pages; but of that is too much for your space it can easily be divided.

Should it be thought desirable to have any illustrations, there are some in the possession of the Trust Society which might be reproduced; and I could furnish a few ink drawings capable of being reproduced in process blocks. This might increase the interest of the articles, but would not be absolutely necessary.

Copy to Museum of Natural History

I write now so that you may see I have been attending to the matter, and may have notice when
of the M.S. beforehand.

Truly yours
J. M. Dawson
