Henry is still in London

My dear Cousin

I got your welcome

letter an astonishing

power last evening.

Mr Crow had already telegraphed you from

London where your telegram of letter to him

had been forwarded.

I need not say how pleased we will be

to see you, & we all

hope she will remain
with us as long as she possibly can.

We will have some one to meet her at the steamer where our George also telegraphed to Mrs Pettifore.

I hope your George
will let us know
by what steamer to expect him, & that he will come to us

I remain a day or two I know it is useless to ask for more) if he can.
He can go to Meales more easily from here than from Liverpool.

Maggie will be delighted to renew our acquaintance with Eva & the Mrs to make her acquaintance.
What a comfort it must be for your family to be settling down so near you, & that they are so decided. Our family

people are all at home except Alice who is at Cheltenham College,
We have been up to London & Leamington for a short week, partly on account of Agnes & Paul, who has been with us since George's return from America.
Please give my kindest remembrance to Mrs. Denny.
I know she has a very busy life, & always feel doubtfully grateful to her for a letter in consequence.
Maggie joined in best wishes to all & believe me, ever Yours very sincerely Jane Crow

Stonleigh,

Rock Ferry.

You will be sorry to hear that Mr Scott hurt his foot badly about a week
since, he fell in one of his fields spraining the ankle & breaking a small bone, but he is progressing away
favorably; Maggie
has her pouches full
but is an excellent milk. He & Minnie are well.

A book & two pamphlets have come in our absence, thank Mr in George's name for them all.
