Dearst William

Last ev of the mail brought a large bundle of letters for you Anna & myself. Amongst others one from Mr Armstrong a copy of which & his testimonials I mail today for you. Also a note from Mr Baynes & Mr Forbes

Also a Scientific epistle from Caruthers' & a letter for me from Perry. all of which I intend to remail to you.

I thank you very cordially for the telegram from Charlotte Lower received yesterday ev. Not being at all sure about the time for mailing to you I am hurrying my dispatches off at once to catch the first opportunity

The only other matter for you is a receipt from the Express Comy. for a bag from New York lying at the Custom House & books from the Smithsonian Institut to be acknowledged. I shall direct Hamilton as to both of these. It continues to be very cool here with nightly rain.

I shall be very glad if such English mail brings good news from Perry.
Mr Baynes remarks I P's languishing thoughts of home make one rather anxious about him. No doubt he is worn out & if only off to outdoor work. free from fear of examin: I hope he will be quite bright again.

We are all very well. A succession of small tea parties goes on here. Anna is off to Sally Patts tonight to meet one of her old Toronto friends - Evas birthday occurs on Friday when I have promised her a little party. Miss Lums began our weekly Scriptures reading to day when we had quite a number. We hope before next week to see the Mr Cash's This are expected on the 20th. I believe so far as gossip goes I have now given my entire stock. Mr York met with the Mr Donalds please remember me to them. I wish up an invitation from a desirable family for Anne for next summer. With love William.
I remain your loving parent.
