

Grand I see she asks Anne out to see her. I suppose you will see her from some house before you take this point. She says she likes the place just this morning. I'll let her hope they have a letter enclosed from Mrs. W. I believe you will see her before you meet.

to hear you have so much trouble I worry about that. Mimmy affairs.
I had hoped that in accordance with your promise you were taking things easy & working only, far below, the standard of weariness.
Instead of that you have been trailing in the old way & worrying besides. Prentiss seems to be a knave or a fool, or a mixture of both. I think he is trying to get a very high price for the Concern, & I am disposed to think that Peary has come in the interest of some intending purchaser. I am longing to be at home & have a talk about our own affairs. but is on account of all my arrangements with the Campbells & the improvements in Rankine & Co. I would still like to abide my decision of staying till Friday morning. Mrs C. has in the most cordial & kind way asked me to have Rankine as a Companion to Lane who returns from the Marywite on Saturday, I have consented, subject to your approval & sanction. The boating naturally suggests the greatest risk.

Mr. Campbell has made several calls in regard to the boat which Lane is bound to obey & which Rankine two pleads himself to attend to. They are neither of them allowed to go out in it without express permission.

Notwithstanding this I will not bear the responsibility of leaving him without your free consent. If you refuse it try to give a cautious reason for Mrs C. has asked him in such a nice way. I got the parcel sent by you two weeks ago today. I have asked for it many times. Sallery is Eric's birthday tomorrow a party of Gail's - Katie Parker & are asked on her account. She has also received several little presents

The weather continues cool & showery altho' not so bitterly cold as the greater part of last week. I am not at all sorry that you may have to go to Iceland. You must have change of air before resuming your studies & if you do not make two hurried <sup>pauses</sup> it will not be a pleasant trip for A. In the note from Mrs Murray enclosed in the
