The days pass
on & though so late we have little to remind us that the summer is gone - indeed the weather for the past 2 days has been hot & muggy & oppressive. I don't mind it myself, but I found poor Cassy looking very flat & feeling low, doubtless because of the state of the atmosphere.
The house next door seems very deserted, without you but the two maids are very busy. I only got them marketing yesterday they declared they wanted nothing, & all I have got for them till now is a lb of meringues - which I ordered as I was getting some myself - The gillies are pleas there are 8 - as light as can be, but I know the slavers will come through that tricking - If I had seen if before they were settled I wd have got other, for I know by experience how tiresome it is to change it later. I think all you left to do will be done in a day or two. Annie seemed to think you can come back this week I said I wd let her know when I heard.

Mr. Cuthbert continues to preach the main part of his congregations still dissenters. He is staying with the Finleys, & has spoken with the black leaders to the Episcopalian have not been entertained there, many of the ministers & clergymen to be seen at the meeting.
I you wd be very pleased with his unconfessing evangelical doctrine.

The children have got over their colds with little disturbance & they will have no more. Every one seems to have been seriously afflicted.

Carlyle is leaving the College having accepted the position offered him by the Govt as something of a bribe, the students greatly lament his departure. Bernard thinks it will be difficult to replace him unless his salary is given - Carlyle is to get $8000 in his new place -

Gray has had a cold I wrote & asked him to try & come down, & begged of him to have proper advice but have not heard since.

Victor has circumvented the chicken trap without difficulty, but Harriet has not yet left home Mary has offered her all sorts of inducements, but so far ineffectually.

Carlyle sends love, & so have several other people. The Penhalloes are giving an entertainment at the Bot. Gardens "a private view of Chrysalis mummies" & a tea - the card reads "Prof & Mrs P.

It seems a little odd but will be useful business Also a card from Mrs J. Clark Murray - An
at Home to the faculty of Arts" Each one pressing & striving to the front - I believe the Veterans' went into their house yesterday.

I hope the lectures go on well - I have had two people eager to know about Jessie's housemaid - Mrs. Cley ed. had stared her at all - but was Mrs. Carrels & I told her at once she wd not like her -

With much love
affection
Aunt
