

Tellowfield

My dear Mrs Dawson.

I send by this same post, a handkerchief of G. Dawsons & a piece of your bag, which I fear you must have missed;
which, have been lying in my basket, not wanting time, but simply lying aside, that affli a little ~~which~~ I should have an excuse for a little chat with you.

So please forgive the delay I only hope the bag will intense longing to talk to you comes over me now & again - & though I see little chance of our meeting in Canada next year, I cannot in the least accept the thought we shall not talk again; or at any rate I shall not listen to none of your delightful family histories.

However, whether or no, there is one solid ~~advice~~ pleasure stored away in memory, safe, where nothing can spoil it -

We are being busy as usual. My husband lecturing every evening this week, I struggling to gain admittance for a poor Paralyzed woman to one of our Hospitals - of Edith, who by the way has been poorly almost ever since you left; is preparing for a visit to Durham - & the small boy is letting off squibs & crackers - To day has been "Degree Day" in our New University, all our men have appeared in robes of wondrous colour - the ceremony is pretty, but very simple & in English, instead of the almost universal Latin. I have thought of you & your wicker preparations this week much, our own white curtains are giving place to heavy warm ones.

not suffer - & you are not to write to me & say you have received these things, I shall know you have done so: quite well.

I would how much you have been resting since you
I fear, London is hardly the best place in which to begin. seriously though, I do hope you will be able to do something of the sort, for your own sake & Dr Dawson's - Do you know the most

& here our work in writing ends, as far as the house is concerned: a few garden treasures must be secured.
I wonder how she is liking London, & what are her young fresh ideas of men attain as she finds them in our big black city; & by the way, she has found a fog during her scrambles, or has tumbled in the "Temple Gardens" or knelt on the grave of some Heroe.

hi best muslin
I should much like to come to London for the first time again - show good night dear Mrs Dawson In give, my disconnection chat. Kindly give our kindest regards to Dr Dawson & Eva. Accept the same from Believe me Sincerely Yours
