My dear Anna

I have to write on this rowdy little scrip to keep the letter from being too heavy, but it just about suits all the news going down here. The mail comes in at the Cacouina post office this year at 11 o'clock P.M. Rankine went over for the letters &c this morning, the baker took him to the village on his cart and he trusted to any chance "lifts" to help him back, when he got to the post office there was no one there but a little girl, so by way of doing the best he could, he went to the "D" box and looked the things over; he came back with one thing (which was my "Boys own") and said that there were some papers addressed Dawson and he thought a letter also, so we do not know whether

There is one for us Today or not.
You see what disastrous effects follow papas bad writing.

I hope you remembered to tell papa about me wanting the American naturalists so as to know what to do with my moths eggs which I mentioned in my last letter.

Mama says to bring down all the dripping that Mary has when you come. Such a nasty message keeps me from writing any more, so you see I conclude by intimating that I
