July 6th / 91

6.15 p. m.

Just leaving for dinner at the M<sup>d</sup>s.
Thank you for another letter, which I did not expect after your threat.

This morning no less than eight people came to consult me about various matters, so that it was after noon before I could begin any work. I found the papers that your father wanted and sent them by post.

Cox was in this morning having come down to meet friends that he expected from England. He missed the boat at St Annis on Saturday, then went on th in the afternoon to Rijard by train, slept there and then went on to St A early yesterday morning by a small steam launch that he chartered at Rijard. He says that they like the house exceedingly and that it is just the place that they want.
But I must own. Some call from your fond husband. B.
