

Concern about Eric and his illness

Anna to take his good advice

Oct 11/94

Dear Anna,

I have not written to you for a long time, believing that the club was being so well attended to by others. To greet me in my place in it I have not the lips been thanking of you and Eric and praying for you and have been considering deeply

likes to be helpful
You are I know
very generous that perhaps I should go
out, and so are we all, but he has had many little things to attend to here and the weather since he came has been very bad, terminating
in an early storm
yesterday, and now
we look for improvement though the sky
has not quite cleared up.

He has now made
up his mind
to a plan which he will himself
explain to you
and which we think feasible.

It may not at the moment seem
the best to you
but it has been carefully thought out
and will enable Rankine & aid you

More effectual than
in any other way,
I shall furnish funds
for Rankine's expedition so that it will be no
charge to him
or you.

In regard to Abelle Rankine can you tell me what we think of the medical man whom you have been reading was not there when we were at least we heard nothing of him.

He seems to have some good ideas; but may after all be somewhat of an advertiser. I cannot find any mention of him in the guide-books &
I have friends there
of whom I can inquire,
but as Whittle would be available not later in the season I can do no after some decision is arrived at as to the earlier months. I can imagine that if it is possible to remain at Saravali in early winter a trip to Whittle when

The May flowers and early strawberries are in bloom by February and March,
might be very refreshing.
~~If we can get~~ Rawlins to go, all these matters can be discussed with advantage as his judgment is I think better than that of most medical men you can consult, and after seeing Indian a definite plan of Campaign may be evolved on. If we can do anything to where you and help to carry this out, we shall as far as strength and means avail do what we can.
In the mean time

You must trust in God and keep up
heart, and the expectation that all will be overruled for good. You young people begin entering with zeal into their School work and to be in good health and spirits.

Love and good wishes to you and Sis dear Anna, and the most earnest prayers that the Creator
will overrule for

may be computed in the light and hue
of the future,

Ever yours

J. M. Dawson

P. Rankine who has
