My dear Anna,

Many thanks for the chance to read Maggie Crow's letter. - It is rather interesting, although as you say it does not contain very much. I am returning it perewith. I had W. dining with me last night & took the liberty of showing it to him also.

As for Christmas - I quite approve of the entire dish for Mother, also I think a chair or some article of furniture ~~some~~ would do very well for her, but both these things should be good of their kind. If you can find time to find out what they cost & let me know I will send money for them & enough at the same time for Clare to buy some gifts for the smaller children. I say Clare because you

Mentioned her name, but if you dislike (or if she does) running about in shops, Rush might perhaps attend to it when her holidays begin.

Stops water is well, but fear that this time business must be worried her a good deal.
I have heard nothing more about it lately.
I had jotted down some notes in a preliminary way on the lines of Colby's suggestions, but I've felt discouraged about it since R's late action, not knowing what trouble it may result in.

Another thing that Father does not allude to, so far as I remember, is all the work he had in connection with the Board of Arts & Manufactures in getting up the old 'Crystal Palace' & the industrial exhibition at the time of the visit of the Prince of Wales in 1861. I can remember something of this myself.

Yours
George
