Oxford

June 3. 1885

Dear Sir,

A letter just arrived from my sister-in-law, (Mrs W. N. Evans, Montreal,) informs us that you are now in England. I write at once in behalf of Mrs Hunter & the family to say we shall be very pleased to see you at Oxford. Our spare room is at liberty just now & there is no time like the present therefore let me urge you to take immediate steps towards Oxford. Every thing here is at its very best

June 3/85 L. J. Evans,
Oxford.

Now there is no more charming city in England than Oxford. What do you say to coming here some time next Saturday & staying as far into next week as your time will permit. I mention Saturday merely to fix on some day because London is not an ideal place to spend a Sunday in. Here you can go to church, chapel or Cathedral or pass by on the other side just as you please. University preachers next Sunday are Dr. Driver, Prof. of Hebrew at Oxford (Broad Churchman) & the Bp. of Exeter. However if you can't come so soon, kindly tell us when you can - if our room sh. happen to be occupied we can easily find you a bed somewhere near. Still nothing like the present

I am Sir,

Yours very sincerely

J. Gwenogfryn Evans.

Dr Harrington

Best train from Paddington to Oxford is "The Northern Star Express" leaving London at 4.45 sharp.
Beware of the slow train pulling up at the same platform leaving 5 minutes later.
