

B. J. H's. father very ill -

Little Notes

June 23^d

My dearest,

The days follow after each other one by one & seem to make little change in your weary watching. You must be really tired out. I have feared you poor father must be, though in his weak & semi-conscious state I doubt if he really suffers from it, as much as you do, for him, it is probably only when roused, that he is sensibly conscious of his feelings & gives expression to them at once like a child - & then relapses into the stupor - I speak from my own expressions in great weakness. The greatest distress is often for the watchers not the sufferer - Do be careful to put on some wrap, in the chilly nights & early morning a little thing covering the shoulders seems to me most necessary -

I hope now that you would say to heart, any of my small complaints it is very unkind of ~~me~~ to make them, but at least I don't make them to any one but you - Two wet days have been a little tiresome, but - on the whole we have got a little into shape & I think are over the worst - Lessons have begun & I think we will get on even with the presence of the infant - class - I often wonder if it - will help the young ones to work amidst confusion or only make them confused themselves -

Will you please send me a few dollar bills - it goes to my heart to pay washing etc with my small change & I have nothing else - I hope Mackell $6.00 will purchase my letter - Photos - Refs & record Lancet - Green comes - Linnæus

On a hurry - Case records

Love -

To my dear
Anna
