some morning. I hope she & the Medicaments woud give uplocke much laughter when R. & E's is opened it is a great bulky parcel for which room was found in her trunk with difficulty - A bag of sea-salt brought Conjointly & in all sober earnest as a good gift - I suggested I suppose by the thought that A. might miss it at Quebec as she has been using it lately for sponge-bath

Friday morning

At Mr Pills Collyer on the evening of the 23. Sarah House to James Barnett.
The wedding is an event of the past & it passed off very nicely. Mr. Cooks house-wifes Cabinet maker. & his maid with Mrs Baynes Anna Saphie who is now staying with them & Mr. Evans who I may whisper (in jest) is now supposed to be paying his addresses to her to sustain me. The bride fairly seemed much gratified by our kindness & did not sit long after getting coffee which was wise as it would soon have become embarrassing.

Somewhat sad to have you & Anna away from us. Papa is too anxious to find a quiet day for work to observe it much but I feel welcome to the two youngest children with him but a dramy day. You will after he spoken of I do trust some kind friend in London may include you in this family gathering that you may be spared feeling forelorn & lonely. As for Anna she has gone to find greater happiness than she can get at home & must chance her success. I have just found to read a letter from her which as requested I shall enclose.

I have written to Lady Dyle to thank her for her kindness to you & to myself in writing in writing to me of you.

I have got one of your photographs framed & hung over our little table in my bedroom as a Christmas gift to myself & it "pleases me well". That reminds me to tell you of some changes we have made in our bedroom department. William has removed into your room. Rankine into the spare room where he has arranged a string by which after he is in bed <sup>the turn</sup> off the lobby gas which lights him to bed. & the room they formerly occupied is now the spare room with a full set of new furniture first occupied by Sophie.

It is so difficult to know what to do with Eric during the long holidays while Anna is away that I have invited Willie Cross's little sister in from Lachine to assist her we expect her on Monday. Saeley she has Aggie Budden with her.

Last Saturday we had one of our students evenings. It was very stormy & few came
