Dear George

The purgation is wholly an independent thought of papa's, but I assure you it will give me extremely great pleasure if you could accompany us. I do not think it probable that A. can leave on Tuesday. Mrs. C. is seriously ill & has, since yesterday, a day & night nurse but the guidance of all her affairs rests with it. It will be cruel to leave her all lonely. So will you be able to the shall write by Lueschy as starting day from her returning we shall be guided by what it can arrange in connection with Mr C. I have written under great strain so please excuse your affectionate
