

30th July 1937.

Dr. Gordon Holmes
9 Wimpole Street,
London, W.1.

Dear Dr. Holmes,

I am enclosing a manuscript on "Somatic motor and sensory representation in the cerebral cortex in man as studied by electrical stimulation."

This, in a sense, is the sort of thing you had in mind, I think, when you wrote back about the consciousness paper which you did not want to publish. It is longer than the usual communications in brain and there are more illustrations. I have worked it over pretty carefully and would not be willing to alter it or eliminate any illustrations. As you will see, I prepared it as though I were going to send it to the Archives which I did intend to do. If you decide to take it, please strike out the last paragraph which refers to "pathologic". If you would rather not take it in its present form please send it back and I will submit it to the Archives.

I am off for a month's holiday to-day and will be down at the farm most of the time. My family seem to be going "equine" also. Jeff fell off his pony the other day and broke his arm.

With best regards to Mrs. Holmes and the girls,

Yours sincerely,

WGP/HL