April 29, 1919.

My dear Sir William,

I am sending you three copies of my pamphlet on Elizabeth Lyttelton's Commonplace Book, and I hope you may find it of interest. I wish I had known beforehand of your recent lecture on Sir T.B. I only heard afterwards that you had given it, and mentioned that I had a bibliography in gestation! Progress is slow, I fear; but sure. I am now demobilised, and on the point of going for a few weeks' holiday to the South.

Yours ever,

GEOFFREY KEYNES.
