My dear Colleague:

I have not received any letter from Sir William Osler that might be of any interest, but I saw him often during his stay in Paris in 1909, and I was able to see how much he interested himself in the History of Medicine and what a connoisseur he was of ancient and rare books. He indeed had the touching thought to bequeath to our Library of the Faculty of Medicine a very rare edition of the works of Ambrois Paré, which he had bought in Paris. We were very grateful for this, and his premature death was a grief to us all.

Believe, my dear Colleague, in my best and most distinguished sentiments.
