

COS417/6.9

His immediate reaction was always to find someone - anyone - to write on a subject particularly an historical one if he found they showed the slightest interest. This was so with his medicine as well as with his bibliophilic interests and great infrequently it was a subject in which he had deep interests himself and had made preparations for a paper from his own hand.

Good examples - The Astruc Story (Bib. Coler.)

Ribbath

Cicero Mallock and Baynes

Victor the Librarian at Inverness