

1028/62/6

CW5417/62.6

Newhent 1st April 1872

Mr William Osler during the Eighteen months that he was a student in the Practical General Hospital had unusual opportunities of studying morbid anatomy, of which he availed himself most assiduously. He performed a large number of post-mortem examinations, and mounted a large number of morbid specimens.

Notes of Introduction
every name

For the purpose of this introduction and then with the object of the Commission
to be given to the writing of the
which was found of the
the number of
The
The