Dear Chadwick:-

Very many thanks for Bartlett's interesting translation. The copy in the Surgeon-General's Library-- the only one I have seen-- is without the portrait. It is a very interesting little book.

By the way, I asked Mumford to inquire whether you had a copy of Thather's Journal in the Library.

What do you think of the advisability of starting a national society for the study of medical history? A good many men have been writing to me about it. If we could get good men interested it might be worth while, but there are so many societies that I rather dread going into any additional ones.

Please give me an evening when you come down again.

Sincerely yours,

(signed) Wm. Osler.
