

From Dr. Malloch's Journal.
Dec. 6, 1919.

Impudent

After lunch W.O. asked me to straighten the papers about the library in the drawer in the library table. He spoke about the catalogue and said he had left a memoranda about it on the little table beside his bed. Later in the day he spoke about a flushed feeling about his head, and I tried to explain it, but he said "Archie, you lunatic, I have been watching this case for two months and I am sorry I shall not see the pm." Well, at any rate the books are there - do you know about Michael Angelo and his tomb? - Well, it's Michael Angelo and his tomb and Osler and his library." He had me write to several people and tell about him, and also call on some others.. He told the sister "If I don't have it (morphia) I do not believe my heart will stand another morning like this morning." On my saying good-night to him he said "I don't see with the pump going like that why my breathing is so easy."

On this date <sup>very shakily</sup> we wrote in pencil on the fly leaf of his bedside copy - the old ~~copy~~ 'constant confusion' copy - for this Bruce was.

I doubt if any man can more truly say of his book "comes via (or vice?) vitaeque" Dec. 6, 12, 19.

Abuelto: is written in a vigorous hand "This copy goes to Dr Osler - not to Meggie. W. Osler. Sept. 21, 1914."

On the same date he marked the ff in the Urn Bural

Every evening he would be flushed - a "fuzzy wuzzy feeling" The Dr's wanted him to have a good night's sleep - which he had - called wanted him to have 'tea' etc always asserted

Remembrance of God.

"of my trials in Hill Street Church"

Archie's thought he did not want to recover -
Before Mrs. Smith went away for her holidays he said to the nurse to tell her he expected to be out of the room in two weeks

His downward cheer up the doctors etc -

Archie used to read to him Kipling, Walter Pater, E. Nesbit the chapters about the doctors - Malloch would always look down just at himself.

The night they were both finally a bed had turned out his bed left, Archie by force, he suddenly said "He was a fine boy."
