Dear Doctor Osler,

I must write to thank you for your kindness in sending me a copy of "Physics and Physicians", as depicted in Plato".

Littre played on the title page of his complete works of Hippocrates, what Galen says: "

It is pleasant to see a confrere thus acting.

I should like to see an article by a member of the Historical Club, on Gui Patin. It could be made very interesting and entertaining. The edition, in three volumes, by Reveillé-Parise of his letters, would make such an article an easy one - and very amusing to any audience. His comparatively only predecessor (in some respects), Montaigne, could be brought in. By the way here is something like to Plato's "Omnia corporis mala ab anima procedunt" - and gives in his quaint way. "Je crois que c'est ma traistre, il est si estroitement affecté au corps qu'il m'abandonne a tous coups pour le suivre en sa necessité... si son compagnon a la colique, il semble qu'il l'ayt aussi".

It is worthy of notice that the Greek means the intellect, the understanding, as well as the .
Your quotation from what Dio Tima says says in the Symposium recalls something of Voltaire "Nous sommes et physique-
