

On October 20th he wrote Adami:

W.O., to J. George Adami:
Oct. 20th 1897.

1 West Franklin Street.

Dear Adami: "Two of your boys last year wrote an interesting paper on Haemorrhagic Typhoid. I have mislaid it. Will you ask them to send me a copy?"

"I was in New York last night, and heard your praises sung by some of the fellows at the Century Club." He had been the

Sincerely yours,
Wm. Osler.

* I had been giving a course of lectures, I think, at the Univ. of New York, and had been made a temporary member of the Century.

one of the sections of
Just of the New York Academy of Medicine and gave an address on 'Internal Medicine as a Vocation' in which he set out to emphasize the fact that the student of internal medicine cannot be a specialist ~~and~~ and he went a little further in his ~~own~~ estimation went to make the great physician - even of the type of Arthur Haller - of James Jackson and Jacob Bigelow. He warned the new graduates against the besetting sin of Chauvinism that intolerant attitude of mind which brooks no regard for anything outside his own circle and his own school' and recommends the breadth of view which only comes from travel though he was not heedless of the truth of Shakespeare's Philip Tannet,

How much the good that hath been sent to Rome
Exceeds the good that hath been kept at home

The address might almost be transcribed ^{auto. graphically stated} ~~and~~ (so close) reflects ^{the author's} ~~the author's~~ view of a ^{life} ~~life~~ ^{of} ~~of~~ ^{Osler's own} ~~Osler's own~~ modus vivendi. ^{Visualizes} a young Sydgate, who does not fit enlarged in the meshes of specialism, he outlines the ^{proper} ~~training~~ training of ^{one} ~~those~~ ^{who start with} whose object is to become a ^{general} ~~general~~ physician.

and takes him through ~~his~~ what Sir Andrew Clark had spoken of as the three ^{stages} ~~periods~~ - the dry bone period, the brown bubble period, and the period of ^{flowers and ale} ~~flowers and ale~~. 'All things come to him who has learned to labour and wait' but