Mrs. Laura E. Smith, Librarian,
New York Academy of Medicine,
21 West Forty-third Street,
New York City.

My dear Mrs. Smith:

Could you jot down on the lower part of this sheet, if you can do so without too much trouble, the name of the President of the Medical Society of the County of New York for 1897, who, I presume, presided at the meeting of February 22nd of that year, when Osler read on the "Diagnosis of Malarial Fever."

Would the Transactions of the Society give any account of a possible reception or dinner for Osler on this occasion?

Could you also tell me where the meetings of this Society were held at that time? Was this before your present building was erected?

Very sincerely yours,

Harvey Cushing
