To H. V. Ogden

Dear Ogden:

So glad to hear from you, and to know that the Sir Thomas pleased you. Greenhill's edition represents an immense amount of work on his part.)

You must come on this winter and spend a couple of weeks with us. You can have your breakfast in bed, and you will be perfectly enchanted with my corner in the library now, where I have gradually collected some great treasures. I have almost completed the Sir Thomas editions. Do try to arrange it. I am sure it would do you a great deal of good.)

Mott, of whom you speak, is an old friend of mine, an excellent fellow, and has gone in actively for the subject of neuro-pathology. I saw him several times in London this year. ***

Perhaps I was indebted to you for sending on Mrs. Spooner to see me. He seemed quite a level-headed fellow. I am glad to hear that I made a good impression on him.

The small boy is thriving, and whenever I mention you Mrs. Osler says, "when can we get Dr. Ogden to come?" You are one of her special favorites.)

I am sending you a paper on Elisha Bartlett, and a talk I gave in London, and this next week there will be the Locke paper, which will, I think, interest you.)

Send me word pretty soon that you will be able to join us. 72.

Sincerely yours,

Wm Osler
