Dear Dr. Rogers:

Many thanks for your series of most interesting reprints received this morning. Some of them I had already read, but those which appeared in the Indian Journals I had not seen. I am particularly interested in your paper on the amoebic abscess of the liver. I have been trying to work over our amoebic dysentery here, but have not had sufficient time.

I have sent your paper on the toxic properties of the saliva of certain non-poisonous snakes to Dr. Flexner, who is much interested in the subject at present, and have asked him to send you some of his papers.

By the way, a young nephew of mine, named Aylmer H. Gwyn, has just joined the South Lancashire Regiment, stationed at Jubbelpore, at junior lieutenant, and I have taken the liberty of giving him a letter of introduction to you in case he should go to Calcutta.

I do hope I shall meet you in London next summer. You can always find my address at the Savile Club, and we usually stop at Greenslade's, 40 Clarges Street.

Sincerely yours,
W^m Osler

P.S. I am most interested in your amoebic abscess paper - Your results tally with ours exactly. 25% of our amoebic dysentery cases have abs. of the liver.
