Dear Shattuck,

I do not see how your letter of Dec. 28th is among a batch of February letters, which I find here on my return. I have had a delightful trip to Egypt -- two months of sunshine, and all sorts of new experiences. It is a marvelous country, and in many ways their old civilization must have been far in advance of anything the world has since seen.

It is awfully sad to hear of Henry Bowdich's death. It was a tragedy was it not, for a man of his type to die in that way. He did a good work for the School and for the community. In a letter which I sent to the LANCET about him, I remarked that it was men of his type that formed the ll* of a community. Not many are needed in a country; a teaspoonful of such yeast raises a mighty big lump of dough.

With love to the family.)

Ever yours

Wm Osler
