CORONATION HONOURS.

A LONG LIST.

LORD CREWE A MARQUIS.

FOUR NEW EARLS.

FOUR VISCOUNTS.

NINE BARONS.

TWENTY BARONETS AND FIFTY-FIVE KNIGHTS.

The list of Coronation honours, issued last night, creates a precedent by its length, and, as befits a national occasion, distinctions are distributed by the Sovereign with no regard to party. Thus Mr. Akers-Douglas and Sir Alexander Acland-Hood, both of whom sit on the Unionist front bench in the House of Commons, are among the new Peers. The public will welcome the honours bestowed upon Lord Crewe, Lord Rosebery, Lord Curzon, and Lord Kitchener, as further evidence of the national scope of the list.

Two new members of the Order of Merit are created in Sir George Trevelyan and Sir Edward Elgar, the greatest of living British musicians. Premiers of the Dominions figure in the list, Sir Joseph Ward receiving a baronetcy. Industry is represented in the list by such names as Sir Charles McLaren and Sir sumed office as Secretary for India after his severe illness, which followed the alarming fire at Crewe House, where Lady Crewe (Lord Rosebery's second daughter) was lying with the newly born heir to the title. Lord Lieutenant of Ireland 1892-5, he rapidly advanced in political fame after 1906 till now he is Government Leader in the House of Lords. Earlier he was President of the Council and Colonial Secretary. He is a skilled literary speaker, of suave debating temper.

4 EARLS.

His Majesty has also been pleased to confer the dignity of an Earldom of the United Kingdom upon:

The LORD CHANCELLOR.

Lord Loreburn, aged sixty-five, was long affectionately known as Sir Robert Reid, ex-M.P. and Attorney-General. He was raised to the Peerage when he became Lord Chancellor in 1906. He is a sturdy, vigorous speaker when he leaves the Woolsack to fight for his party, but his resistance to the demand of certain Liberal M.P.s for the appointment of many more Liberal J.P.s has recently provoked much questioning in Parliament.

The EARL OF ROSEBERY, K.G., K.T. (by the style and title of the Earl of Midlothian).

Many will regret to lose if only for a time the identity of the orator of Empire in a new title. It is said that his boyish ambitions were to win the Derby and become Prime Minister, and both were fulfilled in 1894, his forty-seventh year. His recent grave utterances on the Constitutional crisis and his attacks on Single-Chamber Government are fresh in memory. A fine example of his oratory is given on Page 5, and his numerous books, especially on Pitt and Napoleon, are in the best style of historical appreciation.

The LORD BRASSEY, G.C.B.

Ex-Liberal Whip, Secretary to the Admiralty, Governor of Victoria, he was made a Peer in 1886, and is Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports. Aged seventy-five, he is a splendid yachtsman and has covered over 300,000 miles in his Sunbeam.

The LORD CURZON OF KEDLESTON, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E.

Lord Curzon sits in the House of Lords as an Irish Peer, and will one day succeed as Lord Scarsdale. The brilliant Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs of 1895 became Viceroy of India in 1899 at the age of forty, and his six years there are an epoch in Indian history. He lost his beautiful wife, a Miss Leiter, after his return. His activity in the recent parliamentary crisis will not be forgotten.

4 VISCOUNTS.

His Majesty has also been pleased to confer the dignity of a Viscounty of the United Kingdom upon:

The LORD ELIBANK.

Lord Elibank, a Scottish title created in 1643, for a descendant of a hero of Flodden, is aged seventy-one. He was sixteen years in the Navy, served in the capture of the Taku forts, and rose to be commander. He owns 6,700 acres, and his chief seats are in Peebles, Selkirk, and Haddington. His heir is the Master of Elibank, Chief Liberal Whip.

The LORD KNOLLYS, G.C.B., G.C.V.O., K.C.M.G., I.S.O.

Born in 1837, when Queen Victoria came to the throne, Lord Knollys has devoted his life to the service of her family. He was the late King's Private Secretary from 1870, and retains the joint office with Sir Arthur Bigge in the present King's service. His retirement after the Coronation will leave a noteworthy gap.

The LORD ALLENDALE.

Wentworth Beaumont, aged fifty-one, ex-Liberal M.P. for Hexham, and Vice-Chamberlain of the Household, is now Captain

Benson, a granddaughter of the Right Hon. A. J. Mundella, is a notable Liberal hostess.

ARRIVAL OF ROYAL GUESTS.

EUROPE'S PRINCES & PRINCESSES.

LONDON'S WELCOME.

From the four corners of the earth Princes and Princesses, Envoys and Ambassadors, arrived in London yesterday to attend the Coronation. No fewer than forty representatives of foreign States and rulers reached London in the course of the day. They were:

The German Crown Prince and Princess. Prince Henry of Prussia. Prince Henry of the Netherlands. Archduke Charles Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary. Grand Duke Boris of Russia. Mr. John Hays Hammond, United States Special Ambassador. Crown Prince and Princess of Greece. Grand Duke and Duchess of Hesse. Prince and Princess Frederick Charles of Hesse. Duke Albert of Württemberg. Prince and Princess John George of Saxony. Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. Vice-Admiral Fauques de Jonquière and the French delegation. Crown Prince of Bulgaria. Prince Alexander of Serbia. Infante Don Fernando, Spain. Prince and Princess George of Greece. Duke and Duchess of Aosta, Italy. Hereditary Prince and Princess of Montenegro. Prince Rupert of Bavaria. Hereditary Prince of Monaco. M. Johannes Irgens, Norway. Prince Youssouf Izzedin Effendi, Turkey. Señor Felipe Pardo, Peru. Señor Santos Domínguez, Venezuela. Comte de Marchant, representing the Holy See.

Large crowds assembled at Victoria Station to welcome the foreign guests. More than ever was London yesterday the converging centre of the world. The tide of enthusiasm rose as guest after guest arrived and drove off in royal carriages. None were allowed to pass unnoticed.

Colour, picturesqueness, and a note of royal pageantry were features of the reception. The costumes of East and West were mingled in the station amid the flowers and ferns and royal red of the decorations. The public in the station precincts was alert, cordial, and enthusiastic. The German Crown Prince and Princess were especial favourites, and hats and handkerchiefs were waved and loud cheers given as they passed through the streets. The wise men from Persia and the East, the tall and aristocratic representatives of German princely houses, and the olive-skinned delegates from the South American Republics all received their welcome from the people.

The German Crown Prince and Princess and Prince Henry of the Netherlands arrived by the same train in the morning. On the platform to welcome them were the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Princess Patricia, Prince Christian, the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, the Duke of Teck, and the personnel of the German Embassy and the Dutch Legation.

As the Crown Prince and Princess stepped

THEIR MAJESTIES' THRONES.

Their Majesties were present at the Abbey for an hour and three-quarters, and all the chief points of the crowning were studied and practised. Another rehearsal will be held to-day.

THE KING ENTHRONED.

PICTURESQUE INCIDENTS OF THE REHEARSAL.

During yesterday afternoon the King and the Queen paid a visit to Westminster Abbey, and there, with the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, and the Archbishop of Canterbury rehearsed portions of the actual Coronation service.

Their Majesties drove to the Abbey in a closed motor-car at three o'clock, attended by Commander Sir Charles Cust, R.N., equerry to the King. It was the desire of the King that the visit should remain as private as possible, and with this object the motor-car used was not one of his Majesty's special un-numbered cars, which might attract attention in the streets, but a car from the royal garage bearing a London number. The King and Queen entered the Abbey by way of the cloisters from Dean's-yard, and then through a side doorway which will be utilised by ticket-holders on Coronation Day.

Inside the Abbey their Majesties made a complete inspection of the arrangements, being escorted by the Duke of Norfolk and ocratic representatives of German princely houses, and the olive-skinned delegates from the South American Republics all received their welcome from the people.

The German Crown Prince and Princess and Prince Henry of the Netherlands arrived by the same train in the morning. On the platform to welcome them were the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Princess Patricia, Prince Christian, the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, the Duke of Teck, and the personnel of the German Embassy and the Dutch Legation.

As the Crown Prince and Princess stepped on to the platform they were cordially greeted by the Duke of Connaught, who represented the King. The Crown Prince is a tall spare agile man of fair complexion, with quick movements, and bears an unmistakable likeness to his father the Kaiser. The Princess was dressed in blue with a large wide-brimmed white hat trimmed with white feathers.

A few minutes later another royal train arrived, bearing the representatives of Hesse, Württemberg, Saxony, and Mecklenburg-Strelitz. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught remained to welcome them.

At five o'clock in the afternoon the Duke and Duchess again went to the station, and there welcomed, on the King's behalf, the representatives of the United States, France, Austria, Russia, Spain, Italy, Turkey, Belgium, Bulgaria, Greece, Servia, Montenegro, Bavaria, Norway, Monaco, Saxecoburg, Peru, Persia, the Vatican, Venezuela, Cuba, and Honduras.

Two packs of cards, designed by Mr. Seymour Lucas, R.A., were presented by the Playing-card Makers. The meaning of the design was explained to the Queen by Mr. A. T. Walmisley, the master. The cards he said, were of the kind most popular in the Court of Henry VII. Three galleons on the back were placed there, he explained, to indicate the King's experience in naval matters. Two merchant ships, loaded with wealth, were meant to symbolise good fortune in the coronation. Two similar packs of cards were left at the Palace for the King.

A fan of lace, intricately designed and woven, was the present from the Fanmakers' Company and to Mr. Oscar Berry, the master, with Sir Homewood Crawford, a past master, and the City Solicitor, made the presentation, the Queen said: "This is the prettiest fan, I think, I have ever seen. The cards he said, were of the kind most popular in the Court of Henry VII. Three galleons on the back were placed there, he explained, to indicate the King's experience in naval matters. Two merchant ships, loaded with wealth, were meant to symbolise good fortune in the commercial reign. Two similar packs of cards were left at the Palace for the King.

A fan of ivory, of a shape, intricately designed and worked, was the present from the Fanmakers' Company, and to Mr. Oscar Berry, the master, with Sir Homewood Crawford, a past master, and the City Solicitor, made the presentation, the Queen said: "This is the prettiest fan, I think, I have ever seen. I am particularly interested to know that it is of all-British manufacture, and I want you to thank your company for their delightful gift."

The gift of the Glovers' Company was six pairs of gloves, made of the best European real kid-skin. Several dozen pairs had been cut to ensure a perfect fit before the actual gloves offered were chosen. Two of the pairs selected were embroidered with gold with the Queen's monogram by the Royal School of Art Needlework at South Kensington. The gloves were encased in a box made of tortoiseshell and mounted in solid gold.

A selection of all kinds of needles, in a gold case, engraved with the royal monogram on one side and with the arms of the Company of Needle-makers on the other, was the gift of this company. The Queen expressed her great pleasure with the offering.

Another presentation was made on behalf of the Royal Borough of Richmond by the mayor. This consisted of a cheque for £700 made out to the Queen. The Queen endorsed the cheque and handed it back to the mayor with a request that it should be used to endow a cot in the Richmond Hospital.

Then the King and Queen the processional way through the choir to the theatre of Majesty was in close conversation with the Earl Marischal, evidently well pleased with the external decorations of the annals and the placing of the sea holders. Many workpeople carpet-layers, firemen, and of the Abbey at the time of their inspection. Although they ceased they remained at their posts watching the King's movement.

 a rich salmon pink in colour and with broad smooth petals. Another similar bouquet will be presented to the Queen in order that she may wear it during the royal progress.

Two packs of cards, designed by Mr.
 Seymour Lucas, R.A., were presented by the Playing-card Makers. The meaning of the design was explained to the Queen by Mr.
 A. T. Walmisley, the master. The cards he said, were of the kind most popular in the Court of Henry VII. Three galleons on the back were placed there, he explained, to indicate the King's experience in naval matters. Two merchant ships, loaded with wealth, were meant to symbolise good fortune in the coronation. Two similar packs of cards were left at the Palace for the King.

A fan of lace, intricately designed and woven, was presented from the Fanmakers to the Queen by Mr. Oscar Berry, the master. The fan was made with Sir Homewood
 Crawford, a past Solicitor, made the Queen said: "This is the st fan, I think, I have ever seen. I am particularly interested to know that it is of all-British manufacture, and I want you to thank your company for their delightful gift."

The gift of the Glovers' Company was six pairs of gloves, made of the best European real kid-skin. Several dozen pairs had been cut to ensure a perfect fit before the actual gloves offered were chosen. Two of the pairs selected were embroidered with gold with the Queen's monogram by the Royal School of Art Needlework at South Kensington. The gloves were encased in a box made of tortoiseshell and mounted in solid gold.

A selection of all kinds of needles, in a gold case, engraved with the royal monogram
 on one side and with the arms of the Company of Needle-makers on the other, was the gift of this company. The Queen expressed her great pleasure with the offering.

Another presentation was made on behalf of the Royal Borough of Richmond by the mayor. This consisted of a cheque for £700 made out to the Queen. The Queen endorsed the cheque and handed it back to the mayor with a request that it should be used to endow a cot in the Richmond Hospital.

the processional way through the nave and the choir to the theatre of crowning. His Majesty was in close conversation from time to time with the Earl Marshal, and was evidently well pleased with the beautiful internal decorations of the annexe and Abbey
 and the placing of the seats for ticketholders. Many workpeople—carpenters, carpet-layers, firemen, and others—were in the Abbey at the time of their Majesties' inspection. Although they ceased their work they remained at their posts and quietly watched the King's movements.

At the actual place of crowning both the King and Queen seated themselves in the chairs of recognition, which they will occupy, after their processional entrance on Thursday, for the first part of the service.
 They knelt upon the draped faldstools and sat upon the twin thrones. The King's throne is upon a five-stepped dais and the Queen's upon a dais of three steps. As a result of their Majesties' examination it was decided to raise the faldstools slightly and to make minor alterations in the chairs.

THE QUEEN AT THE ALTAR.

While the King, with the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Dean of Westminster, was going through part of the service the Queen went into the special royal boxes, placed to right and left of the altar in the theatre of crowning, and viewed the arrangements made there. The King during his rehearsal paid careful regard to the exact positions which he will occupy on the day—the place, for example, where he stands while the Archbishop, turning to the assembled thousands, proclaims, "Sirs, I here present unto you King George, the undoubted King of this realm. Wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?"

For a while the King sat upon the King Edward chair, which holds the stone of Scane, and in which he will be seated during those moments of splendid ceremony before the crown is placed upon his brow, and at the actual moment of the crowning. He stood for a moment on the spot by the chair
 where he will stand to be girded with the sword. All the time the King was in the theatre of crowning before the altar, the staff of goldstick bearers, who had been summoned for a rehearsal at four o'clock, were assembling in the annexe. In deference to the King's wishes these officials were not permitted into the main part of the Abbey, but remained in the annexe, where they were instructed in their duty of directing those attending the ceremony to their places.

The Queen was witness, as she will be at the Coronation, of the King's part in the ceremony. His Majesty went through those portions of the service which he deemed advisable, while the Archbishop and the Dean, who of all the clergy present will have most to do, assisted him. The ceremony is of so complex a nature that the King, at his own wish, spent a long time over the rehearsal. In the order of the service his Majesty noted such parts, for example, as where he arises and offers the sword with which he has been girt upon the altars, the presentation of the Bible, and the positions for the anointing and the homage when he is enthroned.

After the King had completed his rehearsal, the Queen went through the ceremonial of her crowning with the Archbishop and the Dean. At one stage she was attended by the Peeresses who will act as her trainbearers.

In all the King and Queen spent an hour and three-quarters within the precincts of the Abbey. News of their coming had flown abroad, and in consequence a crowd had gathered outside the door to the cloisters to see them depart. A knot of Westminster schoolboys had also assembled, and as the King and Queen came out and entered their car the boys gave an enthusiastic cheer, a foretaste of the shout they will raise after his Majesty is crowned.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Scarcely had the King and Queen driven away and the crowd dispersed when the Prince of Wales, with Princess Mary and Prince John, attended by the Prince's tutor and a lady in waiting, drove up to the cloisters. They entered the Abbey and remained there for nearly forty minutes, being shown round the whole building. They stood before the chair in which their father will be crowned and the two thrones of homage.

The Prince of Wales was shown to the place he will occupy in front of the Peers. The Princes and Princess were most keenly interested in all they saw, and Prince John was particularly anxious to have the ancient stone of Scone pointed out to him. When they left in their motor the Prince of Wales and Princess Mary bowed their acknowledgments to the greetings from the Westminster boys and the few people in Dean's Yard. Everybody who saw them remarked how well the Prince of Wales and the Princess looked. Princess Mary was a picture of good health and prettiness in her dainty blue frock and flowered hat.

The goldstick bearers who rehearsed in the Abbey from four o'clock onwards number nearly 300. For the work they are to do they will be divided into companies of thirty, each body acting under the direction of a chief official, and each company will have its own section of seats, to which they will usher ticket-holders. On the morning of the Coronation a breakfast will be served to the goldstick bearers in the House of Lords at five, and they will be on duty in the Abbey from six o'clock.

In addition to this rehearsal one was held in the morning. Among those who attended were the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Duke of Argyll, the Duke of Fife, the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, the Prime Minister, the Dukes of Abercorn Somerset, Wellington, Newcastle, and Buccleuch, the Earl of Rosebery, Lord Curzon, Lord Morley, Lord Lansdowne, Lord Kitchener, and the Lord Mayor. A full rehearsal is to be conducted to-day.

The Canadians, in the dress uniform of every regiment in the Dominion, presented a brilliant spectacle. Just before the Duke reached them the rain came down in torrents, necessitating an alteration in the programme. Driven indoors by the rain, his Royal Highness and Lord

EMPIRE HONOURS.

The King has been pleased, on the occa- sion of his Majesty's Coronation, to give directions for the following promotions in and appointments to the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George:—

G.C.M.G.

- LORD DENMAN, Governor-General designate of Australia. SIR GEORGE HOUSTOUN REID, High Commissioner for Australia. SIR CHARLES FITZPATRICK, Chief Justice of Canada. SIR RICHARD SOLOMON, High Commissioner for South Africa. Colonel SIR FREDERICK J. D. LUGARD, Governor of Hong-kong. SIR GERARD AUGUSTUS LOWTHER, Ambassador at Constantinople. SIR ELDON GOBST, Consul-General in Egypt.

African contingent, representing every arm of the service, and men from New Zealand, Rhodesia, Ceylon, Hong-kong, the Straits Settlements, and Malta, were visited, the Duke and Lord Kitchener passing slowly down the lines and chatting with the detachment commanders.

The Canadians, in the dress uniform of every regiment in the Dominion, presented a brilliant spectacle. Just before the Duke reached them the rain came down in torrents, necessitating an alteration in the programme. Driven indoors by the rain, his Royal Highness and Lord Kitchener made a tour of the buildings.

The Duke of Connaught was very high in his praise of the Canadians, and expressed his pleasure at the prospect of going to Canada as Governor-General. He requested to be presented to all the officers and shook each one by the hand and gave him a cordial greeting.

The troops were subsequently entertained to luncheon. Lord Haldane said to them that it was with emotion that he saw before him representatives of units which constituted the far-flung battle-line of Empire. He declined to believe that we had seen the best days of the British Empire; indeed, we were only at the beginning of our best days. General Sir Ian Hamilton welcomed the troops as brothers, and spoke in Hindustani to the Indian soldiers.

The Duke of Argyll, who was unable to attend the inspection, sent the following message:—

Build, as our fathers built, higher still,
A wider world with British speech and will,
Bearing the law by British freedom sown,
Where justice raises her imperial throne.

Although the weather yesterday was somewhat depressing the chances of a fine day on June 22 are very fair, according to Dr. W. N. Shaw, LL.D., Sc.D., F.R.S., director of the Meteorological Bureau. Dr. Shaw has written the following special forecast:—

"The weather is at present under the influence of a system of low pressure, with its centre off the north-west of Scotland and a southward extension representing what we call the trough of a V-shaped depression over Ireland. On the eastern side, or front of the trough, there are southerly rainy winds over the whole of England. In the rear are northerly to westerly winds, which imply nothing worse than an occasional shower.

"Judging by the weather maps the low pressure with its trough should in time pass to the eastward and the southerly winds be succeeded by northerly or westerly. Then these should bring us an interval of fine weather that will probably be only temporary.

"The important question is how long these changes will take. So far the advance has been very slow, for on Friday evening the centre of disturbance was only 500 miles to the West of Ireland, and since yesterday morning it has hardly moved.

"If it would only continue its slow rate of progress probabilities for Coronation Day would be hopeful, for we should then enjoy the fine weather of a backing westerly wind, but it is hardly likely to do so. It is almost beyond expectation that the weather should become 'settled' within the next few days.

"June 22 is generally a fortunate day for weather, but this year the auguries are a little disturbed by the fact that a long period of fine weather has just now come to an end. The 25th week of the year upon which we are now entering is not, in the average, a particularly sunny week."

FRENCH VIEW OF KING GEORGE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday.

A most sympathetic sketch of King George's character is traced in a leading article in to-night's Temps, which says: "The man is as English as possible, and there is no Englishman of his age who knows the Empire better than he does. His speeches have rung like an appeal in the national conscience.

"King George's reign is yet too short to form a judgment of his qualities as a ruler," adds the journal, "but his characteristics are seriousness and candour. France, Great Britain's friend, unanimously associates herself with the wishes which the British people foster for King George and Queen Mary. The entente cordiale is indeed for England the programme of a wide future."

CORONATION ON THE BIOSCOPE.

Arrangements have been made by the leading makers of bioscope films enabling pictures of the Coronation procession to be seen at music-halls and picture theatres at London, the leading provincial towns, and Paris on Thursday evening, and by Friday and will be developed on board the Boulogne boat in a cabin specially fitted up as a laboratory. The films will be finished in another laboratory attached to the Paris press, and shown immediately on arrival in the evening.

"If it would only continue its slow rate of progress probabilities for Coronation Day would be hopeful, for we should then enjoy the fine weather of a backing westerly wind, but it is hardly likely to do so." It is almost beyond expectation that the weather should become 'settled' within the next few days.

"June 22 is generally a fortunate day for weather, but this year the auguries are a little disturbed by the fact that a long period of fine weather has just now come to an end. The 25th week of the year upon which we are now entering is not, in the average, a particularly sunny week."

FRENCH VIEW OF KING GEORGE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday.

A most sympathetic sketch of King George's character is traced in a leading article in to-night's Temps, which says: "The man is as English as possible, and there is no Englishman of his age who knows the Empire better than he does. His speeches have rung like an appeal in the national conscience."

"King George's reign is yet too short to form a judgment of his qualities as a ruler," adds the journal, "but his characteristics are seriousness and candour. France, Great Britain's friend, unanimously associates herself with the wishes which the British people foster for King George and Queen Mary. The entente cordiale is indeed for England the programme of a wide future."

CORONATION ON THE BIOSCOPE.

Arrangements have been made by the leading makers of bioscope films enabling pictures of the Coronation procession to be seen at music-halls and picture theatres at London, the leading provincial towns, and Paris on Thursday evening, and by Friday

Cross of St. Michael and St. George.

Two hundred Navy veterans, many over seventy years old, will be brought from Greenwich by motor-omnibus on Friday to their seats near the Victoria Memorial.

Addresses will be presented to the King at five different points on Friday—at Waterloo-place, Trafalgar-square, Aldwych, Temple Bar, and in St. George's-circus.

Sailors who will take part in the two great processions will be brought to London by special trains at dawn on Thursday and Friday from Chatham, Portsmouth, and Devonport.

A small army of railway porters tested the Charing Cross stand yesterday and exchanged pleasantries with passengers on omnibuses who asked them, "How they liked the Procession."

Asked in Parliament yesterday to withdraw the police order against chairs inside the railings of St. James's Park, Mr. Churchill said he would consult with the Chief Commissioners.

Queen Alexandra and her sister, the Empress Marie of Russia, arrived at Sandringham from London at six o'clock last evening and will remain there until after the Coronation.

Watercarts are to be provided for the use of the troops in the Mall and the immediate vicinity of the palace. On Friday a special standpipe will be erected on London Bridge and water will be handed from it to the troops in the procession.

The Queen has sent a medal as a memento of the Coronation to a little boy named Sidney Barker, an inmate in the Downham (Norfolk) Union Infirmary, whom she visited shortly after Christmas, after receiving a letter from him.

For the Coronation Durbar the King and Queen will arrive at Delhi on December 7, receive visits from ruling princes on December 8 and 9, be crowned on December 12, and depart on December 16. The Queen will rest at Agra, while the King shoots in Nepal.

Thousands of spectators watched the arrival of Spithead yesterday of warships from the United States, France, Russia, Japan, Austria-Hungary, Italy, Spain, Turkey, China, Argentina, Denmark, Holland, Chili, and Sweden, which will take part in Saturday's naval review.

Although the weather yesterday was somewhat depressing the chances of a fine day on June 22 are very fair, according to Dr. W. N. Shaw, LL.D., Sc.D., F.R.S., director of the Meteorological Bureau. Dr. Shaw has written the following special-forecast:—
 "The weather is at present under the influence of a system of low pressure, with its centre off the north-west of Scotland and a southward extension representing what we call the trough of a V-shaped depression over Ireland. On the eastern side, or front of the trough, there are southerly rainy winds over the whole of England. In the rear are northerly to westerly winds, which imply nothing worse than an occasional shower.
 "Judging by the weather maps the low pressure, with its trough should in time pass to the eastward and the southerly winds be succeeded by northerly or westerly. Then these should bring us an interval of fine weather that will probably be only temporary.
 "The important question is how long these changes will take. So far the advance has been very slow, for on Friday evening the centre of disturbance was only 500 miles to the West of Ireland, and since yesterday morning it has hardly moved.
 "If it would only continue its slow rate of progress probabilities for Coronation Day would be hopeful, for we should then enjoy the fine weather of a backing westerly wind, but it is hardly likely to do so. It is almost beyond expectation that the weather should become 'settled' within the next few days.
