. . . I have written to Wickersheimer to say I should be delighted to join the Société française [d'Histoire de Medecine]. . . I am glad you got the Eloy, which is excellent, and really the basis of Bayle. I shall be very glad indeed to look up the Religio Jurisconsulti, which I have never met with . . . I will give Dorveaux' name to Crawford for the meeting next year, and will write to him. We have the first meeting of our historical section this afternoon. About 160 men have joined, so that I hope it may be a success.
