

From the Regius Professor of Medicine, Oxford.

Henry M. Hurd

23, November, 1914.

Dear Hurd,

Yes, Blumer writes that he has the other parts of Brigham's diary, so that I will send on the two volumes. Do you think they should go to Utica, or to the Library at Hartford? You and Blumer had better settle it. They might be better preserved in the library at Hartford; unless they have a special collection at Utica.

I shall be glad to see the addresses, as I have only had very imperfect accounts in the papers.

Things here progress satisfactorily. There is only the tragedy of the long list of killed every day. The country is in very good form, and it is astonishing the rapidity with which nearly a million men have been put into training. The best feature of all, I think, has been the ease and success with which some 350,000 men have been sent to the front. We are very full here, making up out beds to nearly 1,000 in the Examination Schools, the Town Hall, and the Workhouse. On the whole the cases are doing well; there have only been five deaths in two and a half months, three of which have been from tetanus.

Love to the girls.

Yours,

W. O.