

CUS47/121.1.7a

(Letter to London Times, Feb. 12, 1916, p 7,c).

VOICES FROM HELL.

The Athenaeum, Pall Mall, S.W.
Feb. 11.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir: - The cry for reprisals illustrates the exquisitely hellish state of mind into which war plunges sensible men. Not a pacifist, but "last ditcher," yet I refuse to believe that as a nation, how bitter soever the provocation, we shall stain our hands in the blood of the innocents. In this matter let us be free from blood-guiltiness, and let not the undying reproach of humanity rest on us as on the Germans.

Yours, &c.,

William Osler.

the eighth
of our
had a in our
of our

a dupl. is in #3577, opp. 149.
W.W.F.

(Letter to London Times, Feb. 12, 1916, p 7,c).

VOICES FROM HELL.

The Athenæum, Pall Mall, S.W.
Feb. 11.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir: - The cry for reprisals illustrates the exquisitely hellish state of mind into which war plunges sensible men. Not a pacifist, but "last ditcher," yet I refuse to believe that as a nation, how bitter soever the provocation, we shall stain our hands in the blood of the innocents. In this matter let us be free from blood-guiltiness, and let not the undying reproach of humanity rest on us as on the Germans.

Yours, &c.,

William Osler.

VOICES FROM HELL.
TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.
Sir,—The cry for reprisals illustrates the exquisitely hellish state of mind into which war plunges sensible men. Not a pacifist but a "last ditcher," yet I refuse to believe that as a nation, how bitter soever the provocation, we shall stain our hands in the blood of the innocents. In this matter let us be free from blood-guiltiness, and let not the undying reproach of humanity rest on us as on the Germans.

Yours, &c.,
WILLIAM OSLER.
The Athenæum, Pall-mall, S.W., Feb. 11.

Times, Lond., 12.ii.1916
p. 7, c.

1916

a dupl. is in #3577, at p. 149.
W.W.F.