From Dr. Malloch's Journal.

Sunday, Nov. 17, 1918.

W.O. says that next Spring he and I must go to Paris on a bibliographical trip - incognito. Lady O. wishes she, W.O., Bill and I could be alone to-night. She says there are "so many around." She realizes that after the war is over it will be harder than ever to bear Revere's loss. After dinner Lady O. handed me to read and to keep a copy of a letter that W.O. had written to the President of J.H.H.Univ. about establishing Tudor and Stuart Club with Revere's books as a nucleus. W.O. could not bear to give it to me himself she said.
